84th Year, No. 255 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1967—108 PAGES PRICE: 15 CENTS

IT'S SIMPLICITY ITSELF as the washing machine says. You simply mark an X against the candidates you want elected. But nobody was doing it when this picture was taken at Goodwill Enterprises on Bay Street this morning. And the trend wasn't changing at press time. Goodwill, one of the five polling places in the city, was attracting fewer voters than the others. Stan Webb, Sharon Loughlean, Stan Birch and Margaret Wootten, like their counterparts throughout Greater Victoria, can only wait to see what comes out in the wash later tonight. (Bill Halket Photo)

STEADY, UNSPECTACULAR

Average Vote Seen for City

Voting was steady but not spectacular throughout the Greater Victoria area today.

Only in Sidney where the voters are selecting a new mayor was there any great stimulus on a mild but wet morning. Indications are that the Saanich Peninsula Community will poll a record vote.

In Esquimalt the vote to noon was heavy but official declined to forecast a heavier vote than in 1965, the year of the last reeveship battle.

Goodwill Enterprises polling place had recorded 86 votes, James Bay Elementary School 247, Sir James Douglas 544, and Oaklands School 342, for a total vote of 2,035.

Returning officer Morran Waller said there might be an upswing in the late afternoon but was forecasting only an average vote.

There are 20,638 eligible voters in Victoria. Last year with a three-way race for the mayoralty only 7,505 voted. In the last strictly aldermanic race only 4,861 exercised their franchise.

In Saanich, with 29,009 eligible voters, the morning vote was steady but normal.

OAK BAY BUSY

Oak Bay, with a record 54.17 record established last year to shoot at, might be heading for a record. At noon 1,594 voters had cast ballots or 17.3 per cent of the 9,207 eligible.

North Saanich and Central Saanich reported only average voting and in Sooke where eight candidates are running for trustee jobs with School District 62 the voting was described as "very slow."

Both Saanich and Victoria are hoping to avoid the stigma of a new all-time low-vote record.

Victoria's lowest vote in recent years was set in August, 1965, during an aldermanic by-election when only 3,657 people cast votes, 13.76 per cent of the 20,245 eligible.

Saanich is hoping to pass its last year's dismal showing when only 18 per cent of its eligible voters went to the polls.

WIRE BRIEFS

Ford Men Out

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A wildcat strike by 300 Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. workers brought production to a halt today at the company's 146-acre car plant.

Bodies Weighted

DANIA, Fla. (AP) — The bodies of two young women, clad in black bathing suits and weighted down with cement blocks, were pulled from a drainage canal off the Atlantic early today, police said.

ARABS PLAN OUSTER OF ISRAEL FROM SINAI

CAIRO (AP) — Arab foreign ministers gathered today to start charting a common course on how to oust Israel from Sinai, the west bank of the Jordan River and the Syrian heights, all captured in the six-day June war.

In their three-day parley the ministers were to fix the date and agenda for the Arab summit conference later this month at Rabat, Morocco, and possibly start deciding how to deal with UN peacemaker Gunnar Jarring.

The Swedish diplomat leaves today from the United Nations to set up his headquarters on Cyprus, where he was expected to arrive Sunday. He has a mandate under a Security Council resolution to make the rounds of disputants in the June war in an effort to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict.

PICKETS UP AGAIN

No Break Near In Press Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pickets maintained a tight ring around the Pacific Press building today in the second day of a strike against Vancouver's two daily newspapers.

The strike by the 670-member Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild prevented production of Friday's evening Sun and today's Morning Province.

Ed Benson, general manager of Pacific Press, said The Sun would attempt to publish at least a four-page paper today. However, it appeared unlikely the paper would come out.

No new talks or attempts at mediation were scheduled today.

Before noon striking employees of the two newspapers and Pacific Press began filing into the building to pick up pay envelopes for the week ending today—their last company pay until they go back to work. They stood in a light rain outside the main entrance, mingling with placard-carrying picketers, until admitted to the building in groups of five or six at a time.

The strike by the guild began at 8 a.m. Friday after more than six months of negotiations for a new contract reached an impasse.

Pacific Press Ltd. which prints The Sun and The Province, said Friday it plans to publish using supervisory personnel. But it was not known when publication would resume.

The Province attempted to put out an eight-page newspaper Friday night but was balked by printers, who said they considered the copy "hot" because it had been prepared by non-guild senior employees doing the work of men on strike.

The printers, who earlier had said they would respect guild picket lines, reported for work promptly for the evening and morning shifts. Picket lines

BIG ONE-DAY BLOODBATH ★★

Cong Mauled In Delta Clash

Mekong Reds Trapped

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese soldiers fighting in the heat and mud of the Mekong Delta badly mauled a Viet Cong force of about 1,500 men and won the greatest one-day battle of the delta war, military headquarters said today.

The battle against three Viet Cong battalions began Friday morning and cost the Viet Cong 365 dead before the day was out.

During the night, the Viet Cong slipped from the battlefield in small units but after sunrise today returned to fight pursuing South Vietnamese rangers.

No casualty figures were available on today's fighting.

Initial battle reports said 60 government soldiers were killed and 102 wounded Friday before the Viet Cong were encircled by armored columns and pinned down after being flushed from the sanctuary of the U-Minh forest 100 miles south of Saigon.

TEEN-AGE CASUALTIES

South Vietnamese headquarters reported that many of the Viet Cong bodies found on the battlefield appeared to be those of 13- to 15-year-old boys.

In today's fresh fighting, about six miles from the narrow canal which was the centre of Friday's battle, the Viet Cong were reported holding prepared bunkers hidden beneath banana trees. These were being pounded by bombs and rockets from American and South Vietnamese jets.

The delta fighting climaxed a week of major battle across the country, almost all initiated by southern allied troops in which more than 1,000 Communists have been reported killed since Monday.

WATCHING the distribution of Canadian milk to hungry children of Asia is one of the greatest rewards for USC director, Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova.

CHILDREN OF ASIA FUND

Example of Caring, Sharing Restores Faith in Humanity

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Jamieson, 146 Howe Street, have sent a moving letter to the Times expressing their belief in the work of the Unitarian Service Committee.

They write:

"It is the time of year when many organizations are appealing for help, most of them for worthy causes.

"Sometimes, in our selfishness, we are inclined to become impatient towards this multiplicity of appeals, and exclaim 'Oh, not another one.'

"However when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova (director of the USC) comes to town, and brings before us the heart-rending plight of millions of children in Asia, we become ashamed of our apparent indifference to the needs of others, and open our hearts and our purse strings.

"It is well that we Canadians—on the whole a self-satisfied, complacent people—are brought face to face with the sufferings of others.

"Perhaps, as Dr. Hitschmanova implied in a recent TV interview, our indifference stems from the fact that most of us have never experienced the hardships of extreme poverty, of lack of food and shelter. It is a poor excuse.

"When we consider how Dr. Hitschmanova has made the alleviation of suffering her career, working unselfishly to the limit of her strength, amid conditions of squalor which we can only imagine, our faith in humanity is restored and we heartily wish for more like her.

"Personally, although we are unable to participate in an active way, we sincerely hope that some of our grandchildren will be as concerned with the welfare of the needy ones as Dr. Hitschmanova and put that concern into action.

"A poet has said, 'Not what we give, but what we share, for the gift without the giver is bare.' Truly, this dedicated woman has shown us HOW to give. Thank you Dr. Hitschmanova."

The letter is signed "Grateful Grandparents."

Many Victorians appreciate the work done by the USC in Asia. They have already contributed their share.

But the Times Appeal is far from reaching last year's amount of over $13,000 in contributions.

We must try to surpass the highest objective ever reached—over $14,000 in the first year of the campaign in 1953.

We must not let Dr. Hitschmanova down.

Contributions may be taken to the main branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Yates and Douglas, the Times business office or mailed in care of the Victoria Daily Times.

SHADES OF DEMARA

Former Convict Poses as Doctor in Texas Town

GROVETON, Tex. (AP) — Residents of this town of 1,300 have learned that the only doctor it ever had was really no doctor at all.

He was a former Louisiana convict who had successfully posed as a psychiatrist at a Texas state hospital, and as a doctor here he had been granted a medical licence by the state of Texas.

District Attorney Harold Hollingsworth said the man is Freddie Brant who used the name of a Chattanooga, Tenn., physician—Reed L. Brown.

Hollingsworth said Brant had worked at one time as a laboratory technician for Brown. Brant was charged Friday with forgery and perjury in Kaufman County. Bond was set at $25,000, but Brant was unable to post it and remained in jail.

"Everybody in town practically worshipped him," said Mrs. William Bock, a licensed pharmacist, whose husband owns the only drug store in Groveton.

"I've filled prescriptions for a good many years and everything he prescribed seemed right to me," she said. "If there were ever any adverse reactions, I never knew about them."

P. M. Johnson, editor of the Groveton News, who said he was one of Brant's patients, added: "He sounded like he really knew what he was talking about."

"He knew about some medicines some of us had never even heard of," said a registered nurse at Trinity Memorial Hospital near Groveton.

Hollingsworth said Brant, described as in his early 30s, went to Groveton eight months ago after serving as a psychiatric intern at Terrell state hospital.

He said Brant, a native of Roseland, La., presented a licence of Dr. Brown as credentials when hired by the state hospital in 1964. He was there two years.

The charges, the district attorney said, resulted from the forging of Brown's name to commitment papers at the state hospital and with perjuring himself by swearing under oath on lunacy cases that he was a medical doctor.

The district attorney said Brant applied for a Texas medical licence under Brown's name and was automatically granted one on the basis of time he had practised at the Terrell hospital.

Brant's medical practice ended when a Louisiana pharmaceutical company, patronized by both the Texas Dr. Brown and the Tennessee Dr. Brown, became suspicious why the real physician wanted his newest shipment of drugs sent to the Groveton medical clinic.

Hollingsworth said Brant was paroled from a 12-year sentence in 1956 for bank robbery in Louisiana and earlier had escaped from prison in that state while serving time for armed robbery.

The Great Impostor

The case is reminiscent of Ferdinand Waldo Demara, generally known as The Great Impostor, who successfully posed as a ship's surgeon with the Royal Canadian Navy without any medical qualifications.

He also impersonated a prison warden, a learned zoologist, a church minister, a school teacher and a Trappist monk, and inspired a book entitled The Great Impostor.

This was the basis of a movie in which Tony Curtis played the title role and was seen performing a delicate operation while posing as a Canadian ship's surgeon.

Demara, now 45, has since operated a rahabilitation ranch for boys in the High Sierra, 17 miles south of Placerville, California.

Lynda Bird Weds Marine In Glittering Ceremony

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lynda Bird Johnson, dark-haired elder daughter of the president, was married today in the elegant white and gold East Room of the White House to Charles S. Robb, handsome young U.S marine captain she met a year ago.

President Johnson escorted Lynda to the specially-built altar before which, in a brief Episcopal (Anglican) ceremony, she became history's 14th White House bride.

Christmas greenery and hundreds of sparkling candles blended with mistletoe, white roses, orchids and gardenias in the great halls, filled with 500 standing guests. The guests included top figures of government, relatives and many of the couple's young friends.

After the ceremony, the couple walked down the aisle as the 32-member marine band chamber orchestra played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, then went under the arch of swords held aloft by six of the groom's marine comrades.

A gay reception with champagne and dancing to Peter Duchin's orchestra and cutting of the six-foot white wedding cake with Robb's sword came next.

Lynda walked a 190-foot route down red-carpeted, marble and parquet floors on the arms of her father to the altar in the East room.

Six groomsmen in cutaways and seven bridesmaids in ruby red velvet gowns preceded Lynda and stood in a semi-circle around the altar.

Standing on the altar as matron of honor was Lynda's

NOT ONLY IN B.C. BUT FOR CANADA

It's a Fight for Survival

Last of A Series

By BRUCE YEMEN

Serious doubts are frequently raised about the quality of French being taught to English-speaking students in the B.C. high school system.

Besides the shortage of qualified teachers with adequate skills in the language, there is the matter of the kind of French being taught.

I. E. LeFrancois, a French-Canadian teacher at Coquitlam's Centennial High School, doesn't mince words about it.

"Some call it Parisian French," he says. "I call it Persian French."

Mr. LeFrancois says he tries to narrow the gap between the French he must teach and the French spoken in Canada by giving alternate words wherever possible—for instance, he will tell his students that "pomme de terre" is the official word for potato but he makes sure they learn that "patate" is used by French-Canadians.

●

He says he finds it curious that while Canadians lean toward American English instead of British, they insist on French being taught on some distant Paris model.

Ernest Lecours, MLA for Richmond, agrees with many who would like to see a more realistic conversational French taught here but makes this point:

"Let Quebec improve the quality of its French before it is exported across Canada."

Efforts to do just that and define "French-Canadian" have been progressing in Quebec.

John Porteous, Greater Victoria school board trustee, agrees that French has special status in B.C. schools because of its "French fact" in Canada but places heavy stress on its international value.

●

"This is the age of instant communication and quick travel," he says. "We should prepare our children for tomorrow when they will be able to mix freely with other cultures. French is a very important international language."

On that basis, the "Parisian" French being taught now makes some sense, but there's another justification for it—the demands of the universities.

"Students coming to us must know the basics of French," says Prof. Gerald Moreau, who teaches French at the University of Victoria. "They must be able to write good French sentences and be able to read the best French literature."

Thus the recent trend toward more conversational French teaching and less emphasis on grammar has its limits—unless French classes are split into students bound for university arts courses and those who simply take the language as an "enrichment."

Almost everyone agrees that beginning French in Grade 8, as in B.C. schools, is too late. Even if the emphasis at that point is on conversation, the sing-song repetitive drill that is necessary can bore the students almost as much as the grammar is apt to.

Marie-Rose Pellerin, exchange teacher from Quebec teaching French at Central Junior High School in Victoria, thinks the elements of French would be much better taught starting at Grade 5.

Ernest Lecours thinks Grade 3 would be the best time to begin it. John Porteous, who speaks French, says Grade 1 would be the ideal time to start French or any other language—the younger the child the more receptive he is to a second language.

●

In Coquitlam school district where about one-seventh of the population is French-Canadian, all elementary schools offer French beginning in Grade 5.

In Vancouver 11 elementary schools have experiments going in French from as early as Grade 3 in some cases up to Grade 7.

In Victoria, four schools—Macauley, Willows, Gordon Head and Uplands—are experimenting with some pre-Grade 8 French.

But as A. J. Longmore, assistant district superintendent for Victoria schools, pointed out, such experiments are limited and are possible only where qualified staff can be found. Victoria and B.C. generally are not exactly overflowing with qualified teachers of French.

One means of overcoming this shortage would be to increase teacher exchanges. Complaints that Quebec couldn't or wouldn't supply French teachers for exchanges have been heard from all Western provinces in the past.

Such exchanges now appear to be on the increase. Miss Pellerin, one of three exchange teachers here, feels that intensive summer training in an all-French environment could prepare English-speaking B.C. teachers to give adequate elementary grade instruction in French.

She agreed with most educators in saying it is unrealistic to expect the school system to produce graduates capable of speaking French without difficulty. There just isn't any opportunity to practise it outside of school, she said. Teaching at an earlier age wouldn't change that.

For that same reason—and because the French taught is not the spoken language of French-Canadians— instruction in French as an art is of little value to French-Canadians trying to preserve their language.

●

Like the B.C. French-Canadian Federation, Miss Pellerin believes only French as a language of instruction in all courses can achieve that aim.

Mr. Porteous feels that classes for French-Canadians in their own language would be out of place in Victoria—and unnecessary.

Teach French well enough and at an early enough age, he says, and it will be the "living language" that French-Canadians here want it to be.

French-Canadians don't agree and even if they did they would argue with that approach because it would be years before the needed improvements could be made—if B.C. people would support the changes.

●

The immediate problem, they say, is not giving French to the English in a province where French is not a necessary tool—delighted though they are by improvements in "enrichment" French teaching.

The real problem, they say, and the one most easily solved, is helping the French-Canadians here preserve their language.

If only their own survival were at stake they wouldn't hold out much hope for success in their battle, because numerically they don't count for much in B.C.

But they understand clearly that they count for a lot in Canada. What is at stake is not so much their own survival, but Canada's.

And as Canadians who happen to speak French, they hope that Premier Bennett, who happens to speak English, will understand the importance of the issue.

ANIMATED CHAT in French with Greater Victoria School Board trustee John Porteous gives Quebec exchange teacher Marie-Rose Pellerin a rare chance to converse in French during her stay in Victoria. A teacher in Central Junior High School, she says she has appreciated the chance to improve her English but finds the lack of opportunity to use French quite a contrast with Montreal, her home.

BUT DOESN'T RECRUIT THEM—CAMPBELL

B.C. Allows 'Single' Adoptions

Single people who want to adopt a child will be considered in the same way married couples are, Welfare Minister Dan Campbell said Friday.

"We would want to satisfy oursleves that the single person, whoever he or she is, is capable of handling the child."

The minister doubted, however, that many single persons would be interested in adopting a child.

The department has approved five adoptions by single people in the past 10 years, said Donald Bingham, superintendent of the child welfare division.

Cases varied but would likely involve approving adoption of a relative by a single person in a position to do so or adoption of a child first placed in the home as a faster child, he added.

The thing to remember, he stressed, is that the department supports the principle of such adoptions.

It has not tried to recruit single persons for adoption though because "we don't think this is the most profitable recruiting area."

With the province's backlog of children awaiting adoption authorities might be forced to consider actively seeking single adoptive parents, he added.

parted to let them into the building.

Paddy Sherman, editor-in-chief of The Province, suggested in an interview that the strikers had permitted printers to enter to prevent supervisory personnel from geting out a paper.

About 100 cots and mattresses were unloaded from rental trucks and moved into the Pacific Press Building Friday by supervisory personnel. Pickets made no attempt to interfere.

Striking guild members include reporters and other editorial staff, advertising salesmen, business office staff, maintenance workers, circulating department staff and others.

Key issue in the contract dispute is wages, which range now from $47.12 weekly for office boys to $147.75 for senior reporters.

OFFER IS RETROACTIVE

The company's final prestrike offer was for an increase of 16 per cent over a 28-month period from last June 30, when the old contract expired.

The guild, in a final bargaining session Thursday, asked for 22 per cent. They originally negotiated for a 35-per-cent increase.

Four craft unions and the company reached tentative agreement last week on a contract providing for a 65-cent hourly wage increase over two years. The agreement has yet to be ratified by members of the unions. Involved are printers, mailers, stereotypers and pressmen.

For a time Friday, it appeared the strike might be ended within hours. Mayor Tom Campbell got both sides to agree to a resumption in talks soon after picket lines went up.

The talks failed, however, because of a disagreement over the role of the mayor as a mediator. The guild said it wanted the mayor as mediator but the company did not. The company said a government conciliation officer had rejected the mayor. Mayor Campbell said the company demanded that he be excluded.

National Talks Asked On Inflation Battle

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Stanfield said Friday the time is ripe for federal-provincial consultation on spending priorities and anti-inflation measures.

"I say this because the crunch is on this government; the financial crunch is on the provinces," the Conservative skipper said during the Commons budget debate.

Mr. Stanfield said he thought there was a chance now to establish effetive federal-provincial consultation aimed at "achieving an appropriate fiscal policy for the country as a whole."

The consultation had to be sincere—not the kind in which Finance Minister Sharp had urged provincial restraint while the federal government was inviting them "to embark on a substantial expansion in their expenditures."

This remark and others in the Stanfield speech apparently were aimed at the medical care insurance program due to come into operation next July 1.

SHARE MEDICARE

Under medical care, the federal government would contribute half the cost of provinial schemes that met certain standards.

Mr. Stanfield said that increasing deficits evidently are ahead for both Ottawa and the provinces.

"Considering our circumstances as they relate to existing programs, we cannot think of introducing any new programs," he added.

The budget debate resumes in the Commons Monday, with a vote scheduled on a Conservative non-confidence motion that describes new tax increases as inflationary and the result of government extravagance.

The motion has slim chance of passage, since the NDP already has indicated it won't support it.

Forces Reduction Comes Under Fire

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Defence Minister Leo Cadieux claims the reduction in the strength of the Canadian armed forces to 100,000 can be carried out without reducing the efficiency or weakening the strength of those forces.

The defence minister came under fire in the Commons Friday from a former defence minister and two opposition members who served in the armed forces during the Second World War.

Strength of the forces today is 107,000.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary South), who was minister of defence in the John Diefenbaker government, asked:

"Is the reduction of the armed forces to 100,000 personnel to be accomplished by reducing the strength of, or eliminating fighting units? For example will the minister take further naval ships out of commission?

"Will the minister further reduce the strength of infantry battalions and other army units? How is this reduction to be achieved?" Mr. Harkness asked.

●

Defence Minister Cadieux replied with a short "No."

But Mr. Harkness was not satisfied with that answer. He demanded to know how the minister would achieve the reduction in the strength of the forces.

Mr. Cadieux replied: "The reduction in the strength of the armed forces was carefully considered. It is a result of a very serious study of the headquarters staff.

"We feel it can be done without affecting the efficiency or strength of the forces or without eliminating some of our commitments."

AT ANDES MOUNTAINS

Plane Toll 67

HUANUCO, Peru (AP) — Searchers pulled burned and mud-smeared bodies today from jungle underbrush on the rim of the Andes Mountains where a Peruvian airliner crashed in flames Friday, killing everyone aboard. Sixty-seven persons, including four Americans, were believed on the flight.

The Faucett Airlines four-engined DC-6 plowed low into the side of Cerro Caprish mountain near mid-day, about 15 minutes after it took off from Huanuco with a load of holiday weekend passengers bound for the mountain resort of Tingo Maria.

The flight had stopped briefly at Huanuco en route from Lima, 155 miles to the north. Farmers who heard the crash later led police through thick vegetation to the wreckage scattered near a forest highway.

"Most of the bodies were burned and the others completely destroyed," said Col. Carlos Farje Allende, who led the first party to the shattered liner. Identification was difficult, he reported.

There was no explanation for the crash.

CANADIAN PAPERS STRUCK 14 TIMES

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The strike by employees of Pacific Press Ltd. in Vancouver is the 14th involving newspapers in Canada since 1945.

Both the Vancouver Sun and Province have been shut down by the strike Friday of about 670 editorial and office workers, members of the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild.

The key issue is wages. It is the first time The Sun has been unable to publish because of a labor dispute, and the first strike affecting a daily newspaper in Vancouver in 21 years.

The last daily newspaper strike in Vancouver, from 1946 to 1949, involved printing trade unions who went on strike against The Province in sympathy with Winnipeg workers.

On Nov. 8, 1945, International Typographical union members on the Free Press and The Tribune at Winnipeg walked out over whether the union's rules should govern without being subject to arbitration.

On May 31, 1946, ITU printers began a strike against the Southam newspapers that eventually included the Ottawa Citizen, Hamilton Spectator, Edmonton Journal and Vancouver Province.

SOUGHT CONTRACT

The dispute arose out of a union demand to get a contract on a company-wide basis for the Southam papers, including The Tribune, which up to then had dealt individually with the union.

Longest interruption in this dispute was at The Province, which was shut 46 months.

Ten members of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union (CLC) struck against the London Free Press in a wage dispute April 18, 1955. The paper continued publication. The union announced April 29 that the men had found work elsewhere and picketing was discontinued.

The 30 ITU members at Le Nouvelliste, Trois-Rivieres, Que., struck Feb. 28, 1957, as a result of a dispute bbetween the union and the photo-engravers, who remained at work.

The Brantford Expositor was closed for three days in September, 1958, by a strike of the American Newspaper Guild. It was the paper's first such interruption in 106 years.

Montreal La Presse was shut for two weeks in October, 1958, by a strike of the editorial staff, over the paper's refusal to grant Roger Mathieu, assistant news editor, leave of absence to serve as president of the then Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor.

In June, 1962, the Sherbrooke Daily Record was closed for 11 days by a strike of 20 stereo and pressroom employees seeking wage increases and a shorter work week.

A 1963 strike at La Voix de l'Est, Granby, Que., lasted from Aug. 27 to Nov. 7, sparked by La Voix's printing of the strike-bound Chicoutimi weekly Le Progres du Saguenay.

PRINTERS STRIKE

The three Toronto daily newspapers—The Star, The Telegram and The Globe and Mail, along with The Star Weekly—were hit on July 9, 1964, by a strike of 680 printers.

None of the papers, with a combined circulation of 800,000, had publication interrupted. Executives and office staff manned the composing rooms in the early stages. Later, the work was taken over by new professional personnel plus some ITU defectors.

Agreement has been reached on some issues, such as jurisdiction over multi-purpose computers planned by the papers to do a variety of jobs for different departments including the processing of punched tape.

Robert McCormack, who was president of striking ITU Local 91, said the strike had cost the ITU more than $1,000,000 in benefit payments to members through the international office plus $100,000 spent from the local's funds. The dispute remains unsettled.

On Oct. 16, 1965, the Sherbrooke La Tribune suspended publication because of a strike by 130 employees over terms of a new work contract. A three-year agreement was signed Dec. 10.

The 36 strikers were joined on the picket lines by large numbers of members of other unions, mostly from the United Auto Workers at Oshawa's General Motors plant. Major issues were a wage increase and job protection.

A settlement was worked out Feb. 10 and publication was resumed two days later.

The Sudbury Star was four hours late publishing Sept. 20, 1966, because of a wildcat strike by 32 members of the ITU protesting the slow pace of bargaining for a new agreement.

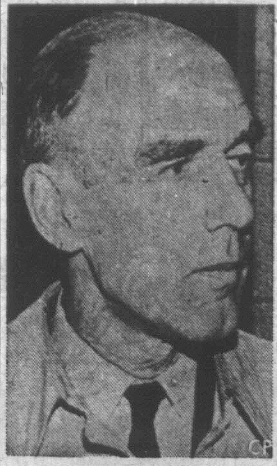
FIERY STANFIELD WINS TORY HOUSE APPLAUSE



STANFIELD

SHARP
. . . target of attack

By
FRASER MacDOUGALL

OTTAWA (CP) — If there were any lingering doubts that Robert Stanfield could put on a fighting performance in Parliament, he erased them with a flourish Friday — especially in a clash with Finance Minister Sharp.

His aroused Conservative followers pounded their desks with gleeful enthusiasm as their new chieftain ripped the government with biting criticisms and squelched Liberal hecklers with telling rejoinders.

"He's proved himself," said one veteran Conservative. The happy faces all along the official Opposition's benches left no doubt that the feeling in the party was unanimous.

He had acquitted himself creditably in earlier interventions in Commons debates, but on Friday he set the political heather ablaze with withering criticism of government financing.

To one veteran MP, he not only bound the Conservatives more tightly together but he changed the whole tone of this Parliament.

Another remarked that nine cabinet ministers, an unusually high number, sat through the speech and that five tried to throw Stanfield off stride by heckling.

"He proved to our fellows that he could look after himself and it stirred their enthusiasm."

CBC Board Names V-P Back-up Head

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC board of directors has chosen J. P. Gilmore to become acting corporation president if the government hasn't nafed a successor to retiring President J. Alphonse Ouimet by the time he steps down next Friday.

Mr. Gilmore, 50, vice-president for planning, has been acting chief operating officer of the CBC since W. E. S. Briggs retired last February as vice-president.

The federal government must choose a successor to Mr. Ouimet and Mr. Briggs.

However, the board of directors is empowered to appoint an acting president in the meantime.

Groos Hits Pension Decision

In the Commons, he "implored" the government to take another look at its decision not to increase supplementary benefits for retired civil servants in the 1968-69 fiscal year. Groos said there must be some way to find money for at least "those in direct need."

'Equality Within Reasonable Time'

PARIS (Reuters) — Quebec Premier Johnson said Friday his province wants a new constitution that recognizes the existence of a "French-Canadian nation."

He said in a radio interview here that unless the federal government accepts equality within a reasonable period Quebec independence is inevitable.

Johnson told the commercial Radio Luxembourg that many of his "compatriots" are ready to sacrifice the "French-Canadian nation" to save Confederation.

"On the contrary, I say that we absolutely must work not only for the survival but also for the expansion of the French-Canadian nation, even at the price of the Confederation," he said.

". . . What we want is a new constitution which will recognize the French-Canadian nation as an entity. . . . In fact, we are not very far from that theory of sovereignty and an economic union."

Johnson said everyone in Quebec resents the present constitution "which explains why we have the separatists."

"Unless they (the federal government) accept equality, within a reasonable period, the independence will become inevitable. That is not an ultimatum, it is an affirmation of the trend

Asked whether Quebec could become an independent state, Johnson said nothing is impossible.

"But I do not, for my part, believe that this would be the best solution at the moment. We must on the contrary, under the mandate we have received from the last election, apply ourselves to every possible means to obtain a new alliance with the rest of Canada, and if we fail, the electorate will judge us and the electorate will choose."

CYPRUS PEACE NO HELP

Greek Regime Faces Unrest on Home Front

ATHENS (AP) — The Greek military regime, having temporarily averted the threat of war with Turkey over Cyprus, has turned to face increasing problems at home.

Far from enhancing the regime's internal position, the results of the settlement and the Greek troop withdrawal from Cyprus have left doubts in the minds of some Greeks of the government's ability to cope with the domestic situation.

A big problem the regime faces is what to do with the 12,000 Greek troops who are being withdrawn from Cyprus.

About 2,000 career officers who were ready to lead their men if Turkey invaded Cyprus were said to be highly disappointed with the Greek position.

Diplomatic sources predict mass retirements in the army within the next three to four months as the regime attempts to head off any attempts at a counter-coup by disgruntled officers who served on Cyprus.

One officer who is not expected to cause trouble, however, is Gen. George Grivas, commander of the Greek troops and the Greek-Cypriot national guard.

Accused by Turkey of precipitating the crisis by ordering an attack on the Turkish-Cypriots in two villages last month, Grivas was recalled to Athens shortly thereafter.

Friends say the general, who fought the British on Cyprus until the island gained its independence in 1960, is tired and plans to remain in seclusion.

The fact that Greece agreed to withdraw troops in the face of Turkish threats, said informed diplomats, proved that the regime feels insecure at home. With few friends abroad, it feared a confrontation with Turkey might result in its collapse.

With former premier Constantine Caramanlis sniping from his self-imposed exile in Paris, the position of the colonels who led last April's coup suddenly became shakier.

Caramanlis headed a Conservative government for eight years before stepping out in June, 1963. He has a considerable following in Greece.

Several members of the regime had said privately they were preparing for Caramanlis' return to head a parliamentary government rule after a plebiscite on the new constitution next year. But now he is considered a major opponent of the regime.

Opposition groups throughout the country are becoming bolder. Leaflets demanding the regime get out or face an armed uprising are becoming more frequent on the Athens streets.

Canadian Is Leper, Hospital Discovers

TORONTO (CP) — A man who went to suburban Scarborough General Hospital with a hand injury has been found to have leprosy, it was reported Friday.

But an expert on the disease said people who have been in contact with the man, who came to Canada from the West Indies 15 years ago, do not have to worry.

Dr. A. L. Hudson, assistant professor of medicine in dermatology at the University of Toronto and consultant to the Ontario government for leprosy, said in an interview: "You don't get leprosy shaking hands."

It would be most improbable that anyone who had been in contact with the patient in the last two or three years had contracted the disease.

Dr. Hudson said his wife has been using a hand-made bookmark that a leper made for her years ago.

There are about 20 other persons in Metropolitan Toronto under treatment for leprosy.

Canada's lepers are all immigrants from areas where the disease is common, such as Africa, Asia and South America.

The latest victim asked doctors not to release his name for fear the publicity would adversely affect his wife and daughter.

Dr. Terence W. Fox, an internal medicine specialist on the hospital's consulting staff, said the man has been placed in isolation.

Nibble or Bite?

MR. BENSON'S BUDGET CUTS are a move in the right direction but they are not the drastic parings which we have been led to believe the overall national financial situation demands. The various items marked for curtailment represent slowdowns in projected increases for next year rather than net retrenchments in already high appropriations. They do nothing to counteract the meteoric rise of many departmental estimates during the past few years, yet it is these now built-in increases which provide the basic problem of our large annual deficits. And it is not an adequate answer to say that revenues are also rising.

Reception of the proposals for reductions varies from criticism that the grand total is not enough to complaints that this or that individual item should be spared the axe. The public—and the political critics as well—should recognize that no hold-the-line policy can be effective without impinging on somebody's pet project, and it is fruitless to demand that only the other fellow's interests should feel the pinch.

Mr. Benson's announcement in many instances calls only for deferment of projects rather than cancellation. The cuts will be felt fairly uniformly throughout the spectrum of government expenditure and they should be accepted by each area affected in the light of their necessity. British Columbia's items—except for one—are not of a nature to cause hardship or even inconvenience to the public. Postponement of work on the forest research laboratory extension, the oceanographic institute, the veterans' hospital addition and the new federal telescope installation in the interior of the province may be unfortunate but is certainly not unbearable. Closer to home will be the hold-down on vessel construction and we can only hope that conditions will not too long make this a necessary part of the economy program.

Retrenchment in wider fields will be much more acceptable. Proposed cuts in the astronomical CBC budget could be greatly increased with predictable public approval. National defence, the Company of Young Canadians, Ottawa building programs, and numerous administrative operations will be popular targets for curbed expenditures—indeed, the suggested reductions do little more than nibble at the problem.

Proposed retrenchment in civil service personnel will not in any way reduce the vast total now employed on public business, it will merely cut the annual rate of increase from four per cent to two per cent. There is a general acceptance of the proposition that the larger the population, the larger must be the civil service. That concept is open to serious question, and in any case it is a truism that governmental departments tend to proliferate rapidly beyond their basic needs. The present temper—and predicament—of the country provides an excellent climate for a thorough streamlining of all governmental staffing. If it cannot be done in the face of financial crisis, when can it be carried out?

Medicare, still an uncertain element in next year's budgeting, has not been included in Mr. Benson's estimating, nor have the costs of Expo 67. Apart from these items, the cuts are apparently designed to hold the coming budget to the $10.3 billions limit set by Finance Minister Sharp. Under the circumstances, they should be considered as a start, but not much more than that.

Congratulations All Round

WITH A LAST-MINUTE ANonymous donation that left the campaign within a few promised dollars of the total objective, this year's United Appeal has ended with unprecedented success. The largest sum yet sought from the people of Greater Victoria and district has been gathered in by some 3,000 volunteer workers, and the achievement of the $600,000 goal reflects great credit on all who took part in the canvass and its administration. It portrays this community, too, in a very favorable light as one in which the needs of the less fortunate are heard with sympathy, one in which provision for youth and the aged is recognized as a common responsibility.

All this adds up to the creation of a good community in which to live, a place where a neighborly hand is readily available and a democratic understanding of the doctrine of my-brother's-keeper is the accepted standard. Such a spirit does more for a community than money can buy, and all who gave to the United Appeal have contributed far more than appears in the bank total.

One other aspect deserves attention. For the first time, the Community Chest campaign was associated with the Red Cross and it was essential, as an affirmation of the United Appeal principle, that it should be successful. That concept has now been confirmed, and this should lead to further integration of public appeals in the future, with the advantages of economy and convenience that a combined annual campaign can provide.

Obviously, then, we have gained more than we have given; we have achieved more than we planned. Both as givers and receivers, the people of the community should be grateful to those who made it possible.

Appeal to the UN

WHETHER THE NATIONAL Liberation Front of South Vietnam is angling for a hearing before the United Nations to make propaganda or to put forward a genuine plan for peace cannot be known. But it would be pointless to bar the NLF merely out of fear that it could gain some propaganda advantage. The attitude of the Saigon regime, strongly urging that the United States use its influence to prevent the NLF appearing at the UN, is understandable enough. But Saigon is not running the war in South Vietnam and is not likely to influence the decision much one way or the other.

Despite the American contention that the NLF is directly under the control of Hanoi, and Hanoi has steadfastly refused to concede the UN any jurisdiction in the war, there is always the possibility that the Communists have changed their minds about UN mediation. Unable to go to the UN themselves, Hanoi's leaders may have decided to send the NLF delegates in order to find out what kind of a deal might be arranged.

Washington made it clear this week that it will not attempt to refuse visas to any delegation invited to appear before the UN, thus publicly at least appearing to be in favor of the idea. The administration, in fact, could hardly say less since the recent passage of a unanimous Senate resolution that the war issue again be taken to the UN.

At this early stage there are no grounds for optimism that a settlement is any nearer in this vicious war which is devastating Vietnam and threatens the peace of the world. The NLF may, indeed, only be seeking an opportunity to reiterate charges of aggression against the United States. But this is a scant risk, since the use of a UN platform is not going to change many minds at this stage, compared with the possibility that there may be a glimmer of hope for settlement.

"... well, goodness gracious, Ralph, you're not alone ... There's probably HUNDREDS of Canadians who haven't thought of a Centennial project yet ..."

By FREEMAN KING

There is an attractive little area called Logan Park, just off Viaduct Road near Interurban.

Wandering through it is a tiny creek that meanders between the rocky knolls. An old nurse log rests beside the water. It has many plants and trees growing on it. Its reflection makes a beautiful picture.

Along the banks the sword ferns grow in profusion and with them you can find some lady ferns that are new and fresh with the spore capsules just forming.

As you wander around the trail you can see many old stumps that were cut during the days of the springboard and the crosscut saw. Nearly all of them are now gigantic "flower pots." Each one seems to have a different growth of shrubs. Some are fantastic in shape and well worth going out to see.

On the west side of the park there is a wooden bridge over a small swamp. Here the hardhack and willows are taking over and one can see the transition from water to land.

The trail turns back eastward, and you go under some old leaning stumps leading into an alder bottom. The trail here has been made up from rounds of logs in the form of stepping stones which add to the attractiveness of the way through tall canes of the salmon berries growing in abundance.

A Closely Reasoned and Realistic Volume

THE Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism has at last produced a solid and important study deserving of serious consideration by Canadians everywhere. Unlike its shrill and superficial predecessor, the interim report of February 1965 — which probably occasioned more harm than good — this is a closely reasoned volume setting forth a series of recommendations with some relation to the realities of Confederation.

Western

One does not have to accept the official mythology of founding races to recognize the fact that, apart from the native peoples, there are two societies in Canada today; one Francophone and the other Anglophone (although the latter, particularly, is shared by persons of many national origins). One, centred on Quebec, has become increasingly restive and has put forward demands thrusting in two directions; towards linguistic and cultural equality in the country as a whole and towards a radical reshaping of our federal constitution.

It seems to me unfortunate that these demands are so often mingled and confused because a far more persuasive argument can be made for equality than for a constitutional change which might, by a fatal weakening of the federal power, bring both societies to ruin. The commission is probably wrong in supposing that the "B and B" changes it recommends will cost little. My impression is that the costs will be substantial. Perhaps, however, they are the price of a viable Confederation, to be weighed against an alternative which is very much worse.

Equal Partnership

The report is an interesting blend of French deductive reasoning and Anglo-Saxon pragmatism. We are asked to accept a principle of equal partnership. In so far as our federal institutions are concerned, the right of bilingualism must exist everywhere. But, of course, the reality is different; quite apart from the problems of Western Canada, there is the difficult point that 75 per cent of the Quebec French are unilingual. So, having established the "right," the commission adds that "the protection afforded by the right will come into effect whenever circumstances warrant, in accordance with criteria we shall propose."

This compromise is the key to the report.

The commissioners propose a large extension of bilingualism at the federal level. While the two languages are official now in Parliament and the high courts, they are to become so in all departments and agencies of government and in the federal capital area.

Obviously, not all of the provinces are equally bicultural. Thus the French minority in New Brunswick is estimated at 35 per cent; in Newfoundland, less than one per cent. Again the commission comes to terms with realities. It proposes that the two provinces with the largest French minorities Ontario (425,302) and New Brunswick (210,530) should become officially bilingual on the Quebec pattern. To that end, Section 133 of the British North America Act, which now entrenches English linguistic rights in Quebec, would be so broadened as to provide the same protection for French in the two adjoining provinces.

No B.C. Comparison

There is political realism here, for both the Ontario and New Brunswick governments have been moving rapidly in this direction. Obviously there is no comparison between this situation and that which obtains in British Columbia.

However times change; many once solidly English districts of the eastern townships have long since acquired French majorities and with advancing technology and higher levels of education, a greater mobility of population is to be expected. Thus the commission recommends a like course to any province in which the official-language minority reaches or exceeds in future 10 per cent of the total population.

For provinces which have not reached that level, the commission urges that both languages be made official in debates of the legislature and that "appropriate" services in French be provided for French-speaking minorities.

Obviously, there is not too much help here for the French-speaking minorities in several provinces. To meet their situation the commission moves into what may be a much more difficult field. It proposes the creation of bilingual districts in census areas (four in Manitoba, one each in Saskatchewan and Alberta — none in British Columbia) with an official-language minority exceeding 10 per cent. These would be delimited by agreement, between the federal authority and provincial government concerned and would not be new jurisdictions but areas of "linguistic co-operation in the services of existing governments."

At Municipal Level

Within such districts, either language could be used in municipal councils and other local government bodies. All bylaws and regulations would be recorded and printed in both official languages. The courts would permit pleadings in either tongue and provide appropriate translation services. All federal and provincial offices established in such areas would be so staffed that either French or English service could be provided. In fact the proposal would extend to administrative services generally with priority to personal services, those rendered by welfare officials, municipal hospital staffs and police. The commission recommends that provincial governments amend their municipal legislation to remove all obstacles to the use of both languages in local government.

The practical problems posed by this part of the report are formidable. Ottawa pays remarkably high salaries for translators and interpreters but still has the greatest difficulty in finding them. Where is the staff to come from in these bilingual districts? What happens if the fire alarm rings when the only bilingual member of the local force is at home in bed? One has the feeling that the commission becomes less persuasive as it moves down from the federal heights to the municipal grass roots. But the members feel differently because, as they say in their report; "we consider the bilingual district the cornerstone of our proposed system."

Education is perhaps the most important and has been traditionally the most sensitive area. The bilingual districts are thought of as areas with minority populations large enough to populate French-speaking schools. There will be many problems; provision of teachers, curricula, textbooks, inspection and guidance at uniform academic standards. How are these to be met? The commission considered but rejected the solution of federal responsibility for minority schools. But it recognizes that its proposals will increase the costs of education and therefore accepts as a principle the responsibility of the federal government to contribute to the additional costs.

In general, however, the commission proceeds as elsewhere in the report by declaring a principle and then adding a qualification. "We recommend that the right of Canadian parents to have their children educated in the official language of their choice be recognized in the educational systems — the degree of implementation to depend on the concentration of the minority population."

Other Languages

There will be some sympathy in Western Canada with the minority report of Commissioner Rudnyckyj who, taking into consideration the peculiar history and traditions of the Prairies, argues for sections which would permit regional status for languages other than English and French. But the practical difficulties are well known and serious. At the same time, the commission might have considered other ways of recognizing the contributions which people of other languages have made; perhaps, as has already been done in some instances by the establishment of chairs or language institutes in the Western universities. Even within the limitation of its terms of reference it has done less than it could to dissipate the impression that, in this land of equality, some are more equal than others.

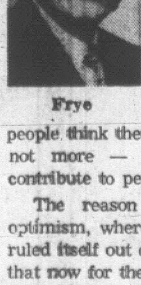
A U.S. Initiative for UN Talks on Vietnam

IT NOW seems highly likely that the United States and certain of its allies will take the Vietnam war to the UN Security Council this month, not later than the Christmas-New Year truce period. Just how seriously the move will be taken here remains to be seen. The UN will not be impressed unless President Johnson simultaneously halts the bombing of North Vietnam.



Frye

If he does, UN people think there is a bare possibility — not more — that the exercise may contribute to peace.

The reason for the faint ray of optimism, where previously the UN had ruled itself out of the Vietnam picture, is that now for the first time the Viet Cong has hinted at an interest in the proceedings.

Some weeks ago the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, sounded out Secretary-General U Thant on the possibility of sending an observer to UN headquarters, apparently to listen and lobby in UN corridors.

Thant was not in a position to grant this request without authorization from a political organ—the Security Council of General Assembly.

However, the fact that the South Vietnamese Reds were interested in coming to the UN at all, for any purpose, however peripheral and propagandistic, was a dramatic departure from the public attitude of Hanoi, Peking and Moscow, which have insisted that the UN has no business concerning itself with Vietnam in any way, shape or form.

New Elements

Other slight, but interesting, new elements in the equation include:

- The arrest of an NLF official in Saigon, apparently on his way to a meeting at the American embassy, leading to disclosure that there had been U.S.-NLF contacts — ostensibly on subjects such as the treatment of prisoners.
- The fact that W. Averell Harriman, whose State Department job is to seek out peace opportunities, recently made a trip to Asia and Eastern Europe, notably Romania — which is a fairly good channel to both Hanoi and Peking.
- The fact that Eastern European sources, here and elsewhere, have begun hinting once again, after a period of silence, that a bombing cessation "would" lead to peace talks. The public position of Hanoi is that it "could."

Whether all this adds up to an opening for meaningful peace moves remains to be seen.

Virtually every favorable sign can be balanced by an unfavorable one — the most striking of which is that Soviet-American relations have been cooler of late than they have been for some time.

This, however, is one reason why the UN move can be made. Previously the United States has held back in part, at least, because a UN session on Vietnam, if successful, would put severe pressure on the Soviet Union to call a Geneva conference — pressure which probably would bring no result except a violent propaganda counterattack by the Kremlin.

But with Soviet-American relations already at a low point, new abrasions of this kind need not be shunned quite so sedulously. The kid gloves have already been removed.

What the United States would like to see emerge from a UN session would be a call for a cease-fire and a peace conference, with perhaps some suggestion as to the basis for a subsequent negotiation.

Russian Veto Power

Russia can always veto such a call, or seek to frustrate it in other ways — for example, by proposing to amend it to include a denunciation of American "aggression" or a demand for an American withdrawal.

Perhaps, if United States delegate Arthur J. Goldberg handles the session skillfully enough, the focus of attention can be held on Soviet roadblocks to a conference. But embarrassing the Kremlin is one thing, and forcing it to help call a conference is another.

Thus the net effect of the exercise could be only what the cynics predict for it — a demonstration for the benefit of Senator Mike Mansfield and other critics of present policy that the UN is of no use in the crisis, that the Communists will not negotiate at this time, and that further military escalation is necessary — including ground action against enemy sanctuaries in Cambodia, Laos and even North Vietnam.

Response to Invitation

Still, it will be interesting to see what happens when the NLF is offered a chance to take part in the debate.

If, as Washington intends, the invitation is issued under rules applying to "persons ... competent ... to supply (the Security Council) with information or to give other assistance," the Front may refuse. It considers itself the "sole genuine representative" of the South Vietnamese people.

But if some form of words can be found blurring the precise status of the Front, it might just show up — and a scramble to arrange private talks behind the scenes would immediately ensue.

The danger for the United States would be that these informal exchanges would have to be purchased at the cost of a bombing halt. If the talks proved meaningless, the price of educating American doves would be regarded by military men as very high indeed.

International Development Centre Could Transform Canada's World Role

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA—One of the most exciting concepts to emerge from Ottawa since the Second World War is currently the topic of secret discussions by the Pearson cabinet and a specially-appointed committee of the capital's highest ranking civil servants.

The idea is to establish in Canada a unique International Development Centre which would become a world-wide university on a grandiose scale. It would be dedicated to the stimulation of fundamental research in the development and application of modern technology to the economic and social problems of man. If realized, it would provide a focal point for some of the world's leading intellectuals to direct themselves to the solution of mankind's most pressing problems.

Newman

While the emphasis of such a centre would be to find technological methods of helping the less developed countries to enter the twentieth century, it could also provide the impetus for transforming Canada's entire role in international affairs.

If successful, it could mean the psychological breakthrough that would eventually take Canada out of passive participation in its NATO and NORAD military alliances, substituting an enlightened role in helping the world's less fortunate countries to help themselves.

Broad Terms

"The terms of reference envisaged for the centre would be sufficiently broad to include the entire family of man, and hopefully provide Canada with a new spiritual focus," predicts one of the project's main sponsors.

Although no final decision to go ahead has been made, a commiteee of deputy ministers (headed by Maurice Strong, the director-general of the External Aid Office) is meeting weekly on the details of the daring proposal.

Cabinet has authorized A. F. W. Plumptre, a former assistant deputy minister of finance who is now principal of Scarborough College in Toronto, to carry out an extensive feasibility study of the idea. Plumptre has already been in Washington, where both the U.S. government and the World Bank warmly supported the scheme. He is currently in Europe to sound out the French and British governments as well as international aid organizations.

Final cost figures for the International Development Centre have not been worked out, but it's estimated that a relatively modest $5 million would be enough to launch the project. It would be financed by the governments of most developed countries and operate under an international board of directors.

At one point, it was suggested that the centre might be housed on the Expo site in Montreal, but a more recent proposal is to enclose its buildings under a huge plastic dome which would allow all-season climatical control. No decision on the location has been reached.

The main feature of this unique academic constellation would be a mammoth computer complex with an information retrieval system and data processing equipment that would make it the leading installation of its kind in the world.

Computer models of the various aspects of the world economy would include a complete index of all publications available on whatever problem is being studied. Canadian universities could have access to the centre's facilities by having their own computers wired into its electronic complex.

BARBARA WARD

. . . may head centre

Faculty would include a small nucleus of top academics, a group of fellowship students assigned to specific problems, and cadre of some of the world's leading intellects who would form semi-permanent associations with the centre, among them, possibly, Marshall McLuhan and the Canadian-born economist, John Kenneth Galbraith.

Lady Barbara Ward Jackson, who is probably the best known expert on the problem of developing economies, is being considered as a possible head of the centre. She is interested enough in the project to be in telephone contact with Ottawa almost every week to learn the latest details of its progress.

The scope of the centre's activities would include at least six initial areas of research:

2.—The problems of world hunger, including development of synthetic sources of protein and the daring idea of trying to change people's eating habits to accommodate them to available food supplies.

3.—The problems of exploiting the food and mineral resources of the world's oceans.

4.—The problems (and methods) of world climate control.

Evaluation

5.—The problems of finding internationally accepted methods of evaluating the effectiveness of various aid programs.

One of the most daring suggestions being put forward is that the centre launch a world educational television satellite.

By providing the appropriate program production centres and putting receivers into the villages of underdeveloped countries, it might be possible to bypass the traditional school system and significantly raise the world's level of literacy. (This may sound like a fantastically extravagant undertaking, but it would actually cost no more than the erection of one of those useful but prosaic dams we always seem to be building in India and Pakistan.)

Top men in the organizational stage of the proposed International Development Centre are Maurice Strong, left, director-general of Canada's External Aid Office, and A. F. W. Plumptre, principal of Scarborough College in Toronto and a former assistant deputy minister of finance. Mr. Strong heads the committee of deputy ministers working on the project, while Mr. Plumptre has been authorized to carry out an extensive feasibility study on the centre.

The philosophy of this imaginative Canadian initiative is to apply modern technology in a way which would allow the economically underdeveloped nations to liberate and enrich the lives of their people.

A dramatic example of what can be achieved has been the recent introduction to India of a new high-yielding variety of grain which is expected to make that traditionally underfed country self-sufficient in wheat within the next decade.

The main driving force behind the projected establishment of the International Development Centre has been Maurice Strong, the $200,000-a-year Montreal executive who gave up his job a year ago to head Canada's external aid efforts.

From the begining, he has fought the traditional concept of foreign aid. "The act of giving and receiving sets up an unfavorable relationship between both parties," he says. "We have to accept the idea that everyone has a stake in redistributing wealth, because it relieves the world's social tensions. We have the money and we have the technology. The only question is if we have the necessary will. It's the great moral issue of our time."

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

The long-awaited first report of Canada's royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism this week laid down some moderate proposals for building national unity.

In a preliminary report three years ago the commission said the gulf between English and French Canada was deeper than generally realized.

Now it urges English Canada to do something about it by making better provision for French-speaking people outside Quebec. In effect, to give them the same language privileges enjoyed by English-speaking people in Quebec.

The report says Ontario and New Brunswick, which have the heaviest concentrations of French-speaking people outside Quebec, should become officially bilingual provinces.

This would entail the recognition of both languages in their schools, courts, civil service and legislatures.

Other provinces would take similar action when people speaking French comprise more than 10 per cent of their population.

In addition the commission proposed that "bilingual districts" be created wherever language minorities of either French or English make up more than 10 per cent of the population. They would be entitled to school and government services in the minority language.

Based on the 1961 census, the commission found 54 such districts across the country, of which 43 were in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick. British Columbia and Newfoundland were the only two provinces without any such districts.

In most of these districts the services are already provided, but the commission is proposing that they be formally guaranteed on a constitutional basis.

It also wants a firm declaration that English and French are the official languages of Parliament, the federal courts and federal administrative offices.

●

Tabling the report in the Commons, Prime Minister Pearson said the government fully endorses its principle of linguistic and cultural equality in all parts of the country.

Since the recommendations were generally regarded as the minimum that could be considered in the light of present differences between French and English Canada, it is assumed the federal government will press for enacting legislation soon.

The report is likely to be a key topic at the federal-provincial constitutional conference in Ottawa next month.

The Bi and Bi commission has completed all its hearings and intends to issue nine more reports on its findings and proposals.

Earlier in the week the government introduced new legislation to reform Canada's divorce laws, the first in almost a century.

Under the new law permanent marriage breakdown would become grounds for divorce, as well as physical and mental cruelty, homosexuality, and gross addiction to alcohol or narcotics. At present only adultery is grounds for divorce.

The bill was favorably received by all parties in the House and is expected to become law earlier in the new year.

Medical history was made in Cape Town, South Africa hospital when the heart of a young woman killed in a traffic accident was transplanted into the body of a 55-year-old man facing death from heart failure.

The operation was a success, but doctors warned it will take some weeks before they can be sure. The main problem is the tendency of the body to reject the foreign tissue of the new heart.

A second heart transplant later in the week in a New York hospital was not as successful. Surgeons put the healthy heart of a dead-two-day-old boy into the breast of a 2-week-old boy, but the child died six hours later.

●

On top of her other woes Britain was forced to contend for two days this week with a massive transportation snarl caused by a go-slow strike of railway engineers.

As an economy move, the nationalized Rail Board had ordered cabooses removed from the trains with the trainmen riding in the locomotove with the engineers.

The engineers balked at the plan and staged the slowdown until the government was able to set up a hearing on the issue.

ELSEWHERE:

France ended a self-imposed arms embargo in the Middle East by making a large sale of military equipment to Iraq. The deal was protested by Israel, which purchased arms from France before the Mid-east war last June. . . .

Arthur Goldberg, another Vietnam "dove" in the Johnson admiistration, was reported ready to follow departing Defence Secretary Robert McNamara and quit his post as ambassador to the United Nations. . . .

Hundreds of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators, including Dr. Benjamin Spock, were arrested in massive New York protest demonstrations aimed at army recruiting and induction centres.

An Approaching Bye-Bye To a Different Bi 'n' Bi

By ART STOTT

Bill Straith used to tell the engaging story of the club luncheon for which members were seated at small tables to create a cosy sense of friendship.

To it came three business acquaintances engrossed in a conversation of mutual interest. They occupied three chairs at one table and were so deeply involved in their talk that they failed to notice the quiet Chinese gentleman who took the fourth. Eventually it occurred to one of them that they were most inhospitably ignoring their fellow guest and he muttered to his neighbor: "Better say something to him, we ain't being friendly."

Stott

The neighbor turned, noticed the stranger was Chinese and, trying to be affable, blurted: "Hello! Hello! You likee lunchee?" The guest nodded a polite affirmative and went on with the meal.

When coffee had been served, the club chairman rose to introduce the guest speaker, the eminent Dr. Wellington Koo. At the introduction, the fourth man at the businessmen's table, bowed to excuse himself from the small group, proceeded to the microphone and in impeccable English delivered a scholarly address.

At the close of the meeting, he met his luncheon partners on the way out, smiled cheerfully and asked: "You likee speechee?"

The bilingualism of the luncheon guests—pidgin and English—bears limited relationship only to the bilingualism exercising Canada today. It suggests, nevertheless, speculation on one small area of common ground involved in the discussion of the preservation of distinctive cultures by peoples of different ethnic origins.

I doubt very much if we've even picked up the bat and walked to the plate, let alone got to first base, in our sharing of English-speaking - French-speaking bilingualism or culture in this city. But we have in the community a group of Canadians who have preserved both the language of their forefathers and their culture while assimilating the tongue, tastes and mode of living of Canadians—our citizens of Chinese origin.

During my lifetime it has been a source of unearned pride to me that Victoria has very largely outgrown the unenlightened prejudice so manifest in my boyhood against those of our citizens who came, or whose parents came, from China. Now, with a few unfortunate instances of covert bias still shown against these good citizens, they are fully accepted by a growing majority of Victorians. They are no longer hived off in Chinatown. They take part in our affairs and their community benefactions are numerous. They're pretty nice people to know.

It seems ot me that they are the inheritors of values given to them by extremely wise and very knowledgeable parents. Their fathers and mothers didn't push. They didn't make demands. They accepted unforgivable treatment with a quiet dignity and waited until some of us grew up and learned better.

Bessie Tang offers an explanation of their ability to win acceptance and respect in this area. The people of Chinese origin, she points out, had behind them, and practised, the tenets of an old philosophy which helped them to come to terms with life and people.

This is part of a culture which, up to now, has been infused in the young Canadians of Chinese origin from childhood. They have very largely adopted the ways and customs of Canada—are proud to be Canadains—but they have not rejected what they considered good in the teachings of their ancestors. And, in the opinion of Bessie and Jack Tang, they have been able to accomplish this helpful welding of two cultures because they have preserved their own language and instruction by going to Chinese school daily after regular classes in the district's English-language public schools.

Attendance at Chinese school in the afternoon or evening for children from primary grades to junior high has been at once a gesture of respect and appreciation for parents who have, with substantial success, encouraged them to learn what centuries of Chinese scholars have left as a legacy to them and their countrymen.

The rewards, as Bessie sees them, include the advantages gained by the individual who has two languages rather than one, and by the broader understanding of life and of people enjoyed by those who have two cultures, rather than one.

To me, she presents a powerful argument for the value here of biculturalism sustained by bilingualism in a school conducted in a language other than English, provided the English school instruction is also assimilated.

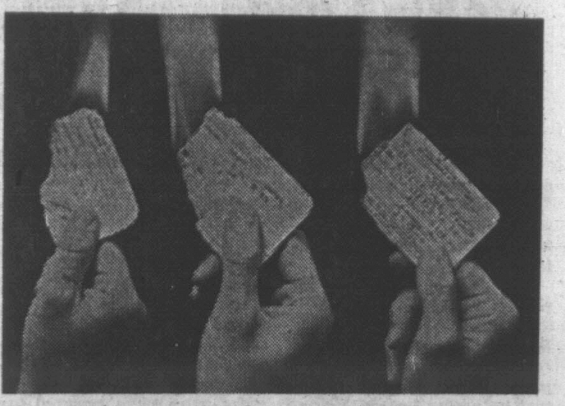
But Jack Tang, who appreciates realism, wonders how much longer this double education can be maintained for children of Chinese antecedents in Greater Victoria. The boys and girls, or most of them, are still engaged in the two classes. The load of study placed upon them by the present public school curriculum, however, is making its demands. More are dropping out of Chinese school earlier now than in years gone by. He foresees the day when they will not have time, and perhaps lack the inclination, to handle both conventional B.C. public school work and that of the special Chinese classes at the same time.

The assimilation of the young people into the Canadian stream will be more complete—and the loss will be theirs.

'The Difference Between A Slave and a Free Man'

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

The Washington Post



These burning Selective Service (draft) cards are symbolic of the resistance of increasing numbers of young Americans to their countrys' involvement in Vietnam.

SAN FRANCISCO — Before the priest stepped forward to the microphones in front of the federal building here the scene had a showy, flip quality to it.

An outstandingly bad folksinger had been wailing on the steps and men in company blazers from a local TV station were fussing around as though they were getting ready for an afternoon give-away show.

Then the priest moved forward, Father Peter Riga, and he said slow words of defiant commitment, a prelude to the return of the draft cards, 89 of them.

"When men forsake their private consciences they lead their country to hell," the priest's words amplified and echoed out over the crowd of less than a thousand.

The feeling on the plaza changed. People looked out from the State of California building across the street with grave faces. The undercover men looked less like cops and more like puzzled citizens. Even those not in complicity with breaking the law felt a fear at watching again in history a clergyman giving respectful refusal to kings and presidents.

As the priest spoke — somebody in the crowd called it "Beyond prayers to an unjust king." — David Boyd listened.

David is 18-years-old, red-haired and conveys an impression of innocent fragility. He's asthmatic, he's had ulcers, and has knees that lock. The army wouldn't have taken him but he's decided to commit his felony and hand in his card, so he listened to the priest, his mouth slightly opened, looking relaxed, not reflecting the turmoil in him.

He expects his father will cut his $125 a month allowance for "doing it" as the members of Resistance called turning in your draft card. Resistance is the student group that is organizing the non-co-operation campaign across the country, and when they talk about "doing it" they sound like religious people talking about bar mitzvah or confirmation, a rite that confers manliness on youth, a sacrament that takes you outside of fear, beyond caring about the FBI, the courts, the jails.

David resembled many of the student activists who are inviting prison rather than co-operate with the draft. Like many others David has refused his 2-S student deferment.

They are a small minority even on highly political campuses like Berkeley where David goes to school and where, with all the fury over the war, only 20 per cent of the student body bother to vote on referendum questions like whether the CIA and Dow Chemical should be allowed to recruit.

They are an important minority, however. Usually, as with David, they're good students, frequently the best. David was a semi-finalist in the National Merit Scholarship program.

Not that he needed the money. His father is a wealthy lawyer. David has had the best, two trips to Europe, one to Australia, and prep school at Groton.

"I think my mother would go insane if she knew what I was going to do," David said, "But my father feels its my right to do what I believe although he disagrees with me."

★

In that, too, David resembles many of the young activists who come from permissive homes where carrying out your beliefs into action is highly valued.

While David's father disagrees with him Roger Powelson's father doesn't. Roger is a 19-year-old who burned his draft card in October.

His quarrel with his father is over implementation, not principles. "My parents talked a good line but that's mostly what they did, talk," he says — but still admits with a smile of grudging admiration that his father gives money to Resistance.

For all of them the decision to "do it" is a turmoil, some kind of dramatic change in their lives. At the least instead of being safely in school they now await the day of criminal court action against them.

They talk about fleeing abroad to exile but they don't like the idea. They talk about breaking, if not with their families, with the life they grew up in. "Don't put my last name in the paper," says Alan, "I want to go home for Christmas . . . it'll be the last time . . . But if my parents hear what I'm going to do I won't be able to."

★

Now Robert McAfee Brown, the Stanford University theologian, takes the rostrum. His iron-gray hair, his even-featured face and his tabbed clerical collar remind you of the oil portraits of other covenanting Presbyterian ministers who stood in front of other secular powers and quoted Luther — "Here I stand, I can do no other, so help me God."

As he talked, the banner the little ladies from SANE carried flapped in the blue cold air. "Not Our Sons, Not Your Sons, Not Their Sons," it said.

The minister repeated the words of Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the Lutheran clergyman martyred by the Nazis: "One asks what is to come, the other asks what is right — and that is the difference between a slave and a free man!"

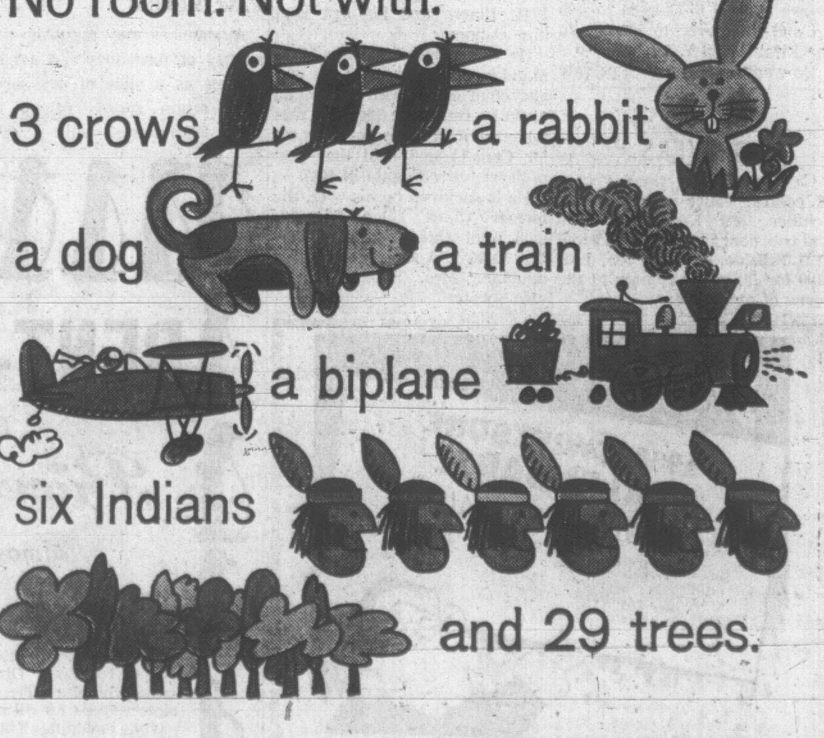
Then the young men who were going to turn in their draft cards came through the channel in the crowd up the low steps to the federal building where the massed group of clergymen waited.

One at a time they put their draft cards in a silver bowl in front of the ministers and called out their names. With each name the crowd applauded and held their hands above their heads, their fingers making the V for victory sign.

David Boyd was number six.

No partridge. No pear tree.

No room. Not with:



It's too bad about the partridge. And the pear tree. We'd add them if we could – just to make our jolly old green-and-red label even more Christmasy. But you can see the problem. We're a little pushed for space. So instead, we'll simply wish you a warm and wonderful Yuletide from all of us here at Molson's. From the rabbit. And the crows. And the dog. Oh, yes – and the people.

Premier Should Take Closer Look at Map

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

It is becoming more difficult to avoid seeing the "inconsistencies" (as one writer put it diplomatically) in Premier Bennett's performance of late.

For example, he told reporters he didn't know anything about the contents of the Bi and Bi commission's first report, which just happens to put a hot potato in his hands that he wishes he could drop.

However, the remarkable thing is that he unerringly was able to pick a map out of context from that report and have it quickly duplicated so he could spread the distortion.

Mika

The map shows that none of the census divisions in B.C. reports a French-speaking minority of 10 per cent or more—ergo, says Mr. Bennett we can forget all about the recommendation that such areas have the right to French as a language of instruction in the schools if the ratepayers are willing to go along.

●

That's just the proposal that will be facing him next week from the community of Maillardville, and presumably he'll flourish his little map in their faces too.

But how honest—or dishonest—is the premier's gesture?

The Bi and Bi commission made the recommendation for "districts" which are still to be defined, not for census divisions.

B.C. after all is divided into only 10 census divisions and the one that Maillardville falls in is No. 4, stretching over the entire lower mainland as far as Hope with only 34,686 French-speaking persons there in 1961 out of a population of 907,531.

But undoubtedly the appropriate "districts" for determining this education question are the 87 school districts in the province and here we find an entirely different ratio—one which Mr. Bennett fails to mention, although his own maps show it.

School District No. 43 (Coquitlam) in which Maillardville falls has a total population of 59,955 as of the 1966 headcount, of which an estimated 8,000 is reported to qualify as French-Canadian in origin.

●

That's about 13 per cent, and it gives the lie to Mr. Bennett's statement that B.C. is not affected by the report's recommendations.

You'd think Mr. Bennett, who is so sharp with figures when it comes to liquor profits, could do some simple arithmetic when it comes to a question of national importance, wouldn't you?

Speaking of liquor, teetotaller Mr. Bennett may yet learn what a hangover feels like when the voters catch up with him for being so hypocritically greedy.

Mr. Bennett and Attorney-General Robert Bonner pontificated about the terrible Ottawa government which fed inflation through the price spiral and said taxes would only increase inflation.

Even while they were clucking over the 10 per cent federal liquor surcharge, they got together to sign a cabinet order raising prices here 35 cents plus two cents more sales tax—on liquor being sold now which is not affected by the federal surcrarge.

It will be some time—in most cases weeks and in some perhaps even months—before bottles that actually have been taxed the extra 10 per cent begin moving across LCB counters.

But Mr. Bennett will be exacting his profit boost all the time—while simultaneously blaming Ottawa and claiming the extra revenue will be used by him for schools and social welfare.

After all, says Mr. Bennett sanctimoniously, LCB profits go into consolidated revenue from which these grants are drawn.

But he fails to mention that the almost $6,000 a month payment for Mr. Gaglardi's Lear jet also comes from consolidated revenue as do the high salaries for the three housewife ministers without portfolio and a host of other questionable expenditures.

So when you have that Christmas noggin, don't bet you're helping to pay for a blackboard or a food voucher. You may just be helping the peripatetic cabinet fly a little higher (but very soberly, of course).

And how does this square with Mr. Bennett's recent appeal for efforts to hold the line on prices and wages in order to fight inflation?

Apparently, it's a case of "do as I say, not as I do," when exhortations are issued to the rest of British Columbia from behind the door which now bears the title Prime Minister.

He must need that brazen booze bonanza for something pretty desperately to have levied it as his Christmas gift to the populace outside.

I have no quarrel with hiking liquor prices, just as I had none with avoiding four-letter words in school texts, but I have every quarrel with using these causes to hide ulterior motives.

Lest anyone accuse me of venting spleen in defence only of booze and bad language, I would point out that rarely did I resort to either until I was assigned to observe the activities of our province's politicians and learned the definition of "hypocrisy".

Oxford defines it as "simulation of virtue or goodness; dissimulation, pretence".

Even Goat Performs Like Trouper

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Even the most critical theatregoer would surely be delighted with Victoria Secondary School's production of "Teahouse of the August Moon" by John Patrick, which opened in the school last night and is to be repeated tonight.

A production like this, in which the whole cast is completely and enthusiastically absorbed, is unusual, and brings great credit to the school, to director C. H. Farr, and those who assisted him.

The full-length play, difficult to perform because much of its comic effect depends on witty dialogue, makes great demands of the players but these young people carried it off magnificently.

FAST PACE

A fast pace was maintained throughout; and close attention to detail made this authentic theatre of the best kind.

We didn't really expect them to bring on a goat when the playwright required one, but they did, and it joined the other actors with all the decorum of a seasoned trouper.

An effective teahouse silhouetted most dramatically as the curtain rose, was later reconstructed in a matter of minutes before our very eyes. The happy unity of all the builders showed that this is a theatrical company, not just a group of actors.

COY CHARM

Lotus Blossom was acted with coy charm by Janet Purcell. She spoke in a strange flutey tone of voice throughout and performed the geisha girl's dance gracefully.

The wrestling bout added a realistic touch to the teahouse scene and Tibby Mason-Hurley played a very keen Miss Higa Jiga. The grouped villagers remained animated in all scenes but were particularly lively in the amusing scene in which Captain Fisby lectured them on the principles of democracy.

Rick Cross impersonated an cliche-ridden American commander admirably. Because the pace was so fast, he occasionally swallowed a word but among so many words this was a minor fault.

Ian McKinnon made a lovable, Oriental - English-speaking Mr. Oshira; and Sgt. Gregovich was every inch a soldier, even when he was lying prone. Kelly Tippett played a winsom, inoffensive Capt. McLean concerned about the murder of his unwatered plants and Peter McKinnon's characterization as Captain Fisby was outstanding. His facial expressions, mainly those of pain, added much to his interpretation.

His gymnastic tussle with Lotus Blossom was as well-timed as that of the most professional actor and the gradual mellowing of his character under the influence of oriental village life was clearly shown.

Ian Pool as Sakini stole the show. This talented young actor has never used his hands and voice and face to greater advantage than he did tonight in portraying this delightful rascal.

OTTAWA SPENDING UP DESPITE CUTBACKS

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Federal government spending for the coming fiscal year 1968-69 will be up by $400 million over the expenditures in the current fiscal year, Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Friday.

Mr. Sharp said the increase in spending in the year starting April 1, 1968, despite the major reductions in the estimated expenditures, was in line "with our responsible attitude to government spending." He added, "I believe it is necessary in order to fulfill the commitments that have been undertaken by this parliament."

'Grits Dodging Issue By Cutting Projects'

Attorney-General Bonner Thursday said the federal government was dodging the issue by cutting back projects instead of its civil service payroll.

He was commenting on Revenue Minister Benson's outline of 51 cuts in federal programs while limiting the growth of the federal civil service in the next fiscal year to 5,000 persons, half the normal increase of 4 per cent.

"The big bill in government is not projects, the big bill is payroll," said Mr. Bonner. "And all they have said on this is that the payroll is being allowed to expand ever so slightly."

"The suggestion that the civil service will be able to expand 2 per cent is less reassuring than a statement that it would be reduced by 10 per cent over the next few years, because it is still a promise of growth."

Mr. Bonner said the measure is not really a cutback but a "reduced forward expenditures."

The minister said elimination of some projects and slowdowns on others "establishes the proposition that it is never too late to repent.

"Most of these affected projects amount to a repudiation to much-heralded propositions over the last four or five years," he said.

ONE SURVIVES

First Negro Astronaut Crash Victim

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Maj. Robert H. Lawrence Jr., America's first Negro astronaut, has been killed in the crash of an F-104 Starfighter jet as it landed after a routine training flight at nearby Edwards Air Force Base.

An air force spokesman called him "one of those young bright guys with everything going for him."

Lawrence, 31, was preparing a project for the defence department to orbit two men on a space laboratory in 1970.

The Chicago-born Lawrence was the ninth U.S. astronaut to die. The others were assigned to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Five died in accidents earlier this year.

The F-104, "a missile with a man in it" which travels twice the speed of sound, smashed onto a runway after a flight Friday and spurted "a little fire," an air force spokesman said.

A second occupant, Maj. Harvey J. Royer, was injured. Royer, 36, chief of operations for the air force's aerospace research pilot school, was in hospital with undisclosed injuries.

The air force appointed a board of officers to investigate. No other details of the crash were made public.

No Decision On Phase-Out Of CF-104s

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government has not taken a decision to "phase out" its force of CF-104 nuclear bombers with the NATO air division in Europe, External Affairs Minister Martin said Friday.

At a press conference prior to his departure Saturday for NATO ministerial talks in Brussels, Mr. Martin also hit back at critics of NATO and said it is "irresponsible" to talk now of disbanding NATO or withdrawing from it.

He said he expected some routine reductions in NATO ground forces in Europe over the coming year but added that Canada intends to maintain its present contribution to the air division.

On the CF-104s, Mr. Martin said it has been government policy to allow gradual attrition of the force since the 1964 defence white paper.

The squadrons in Europe had recently been reduced to six from eight and some time in the future would be cut to four, but no decision had been taken to "phase out" the force.

DRAFT BEER PRICE HELD

VANCOUVER (CP)—J. Roy Corbett, manager of the B.C. Hotels Association, said Thursday there will be no increase in the price of draft beer although hotelmen will now have to pay more for a barrel of beer because of increases imposed by the provincial government.

'I Still Believe' In Chateau Idea Says Accused

A Baptist minister, charged with fraud in connection with the development of Chateau Victoria — a proposed dwelling complex for retired people — said Friday he still believes in the concept of it.

"I am still an enthusiast," said Rev. Leslie Millin, giving evidence at his trial in Victoria county court.

"I believed Chateau Victoria would be a really good thing, both as an investment and a home for retired people. I still believe in the concept of it."

Millin denied he had ever tried to deceive investors concerning the project.

"Did you tell any of them the property was clear of debt?" asked defence counsel Thomas Braidwood.

"No," Millin replied.

He has pleaded not guilty to three counts of fraud arising from the development of Chateau Victoria, which was to have been built in the Esquimalt Lagoon area.

Under cross-examination by crown prosecutor Lloyd McKenzie, QC, Millin admitted that, when he first came to Victoria, the project was "flat on its back" financially.

He said he found that investments from Victoria doctors, which should have been used to pay for the property, had not been used in that way.

Millin said his company, Sheridan Distributors, had undertaken the promotion of the concept in an endeavor to sell units.

He had received 20 shares from Chateau Victoria, some of which he had sold to the complainants. From Sheridan Holdings, he received about $3,600 and he had also negotiated loans from the bank.

During 1964, Millin said he received about $650 from Hillside Baptist Church, North Vancouver.

Mr. McKenzie questioned Millin concerning a Vancouver newspaper article which stated he had raised $500,000 from Baptists across Canada for a scheme to extract gold from the sands of the Fraser River.

Millin said he did not solicit funds for the scheme, but was a director of Allied Holdings, a company formed for that purpose.

Mr. McKenzie will continue his cross-examination Monday at 9 a.m.

The case is being heard by Judge Montague Drake. Mr. McKenzie and Kenneth Murphy are appearing for the crown. Millin is defended by Thomas Braidwood and Stephen Tick.

Chimpanzee Hearts For Humans Coming?

LONDON (AP) — The hearts of chimpanzees may well be successfully transplanted into humans, says Dr. William Cleland, one of Britain's leading heart surgeons.

"I do not see any objection to a chimpanzee's heart in a human," Cleland said today.

"We are already using some animal parts in surgery, for instance the valves of pigs and calves. The next stage will be to think in terms of transplanting whole organs.

"There are obviously a large number of biochemical and other problems to be solved, but this is likely to be the next field of research."

Cleland described the world's first heart transplant surgery in South Africa as "a very great achievement."

But as this type of treatment progresses, he said, doctors are beginning to face the problem of not having enough spare human parts ready at the right time.

For every 100 patients who urgently needed transplants there might be only one or two donors available, he said.

But if there was an alternative source of supply—such as monkeys—perhaps 90 of the 100 could be treated.

Cleland said the hearts of the larger monkeys, such as chimpanzees, were fairly similar to humans.

Colin Smith, assistant secretary of the British Anti-Vivisection society, commented:

"I am revolted by the idea of a human being given a monkey's heart."

Manitoba Man Jailed 6 Months

Glen Davis, of Portage la Prairie, was sentenced to six months in jail when he appeared in central court for sentence on a charge of false pretences over $50.

The charge arose from the purchase of a set of wedding rings worth $51.45 from a city jeweller by means of a worthless cheque.

"Unless you change your ways you will spend the rest of your life in jail," said Magistrate William Ostler.

'Fighting Frank' Enjoyed Lively Military Career

OTTAWA (CP)—Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, who died Friday at 78, was considered the father of the Canadian armored corps.

Fighting Frank as he was known was taken to hospital July 30 suffering from an undisclosed ailment. It was later diagnosed as cancer.

He will be buried in Worthington Park at Camp Borden, Ont. at 3 p.m. on Tuesday. It was at Camp Borden that he commanded the first armored fighting vehicle training centre in 1919.

A funeral with full military honors will take place at Christ Church Anglican Cathedral in Ottawa at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Franklin Frederick Worthington already had a lively military career behind him when he arrived in Montreal in 1914 to join the Black Watch.

Born in Scotland Sept. 17, 1889, he was orphaned at 11 and was working as waterboy in a Mexican mine at the age of 12 when he survived a bloody massacre led by the bandit leader Pancho Villa.

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

He was successively sailor, engineer, gold miner, steward and soldier of fortune in several Central American revolutions before coming to Canada to join up and then over to France in the First World War.

He went overseas as a private and came back as a captain, having been decorated four times for bravery and nicknamed Fighting Frank by those who heard of his courageous exploits.

Gen. Worthington joined the permanent army with the rank of captain in 1919 and began his career as a dedicated exponent of tank warfare. He was colonel commandant of the Royal Canadian Armored Corps at the time of his death.

He had a hand in the design of the Ram tank, which was ordered into production in 1939, but was never used. He claimed the wrong people were asked to build it and it took too long.

HAMMERED THEME

Between the wars he was disturbed by the German progress in tank development while little was done in Canada. But he continued to hammer away at his favorite theme.

He commanded Canada's First Armored Brigade in 1940-41 and finally got his way with tank warfare when he was put in command of the First Army Tank Brigade in 1941.

He was promoted to major-general in 1942 and commanded the 4th Canadian Armored Division until it went overseas in 1944. Illness and his age kept him at home.

He was chief of Pacific Command in the last year of the war and chief of Western Command when he retired in 1948. He was made civil defence co-ordinator for Canada and held that post until he retired again in 1957.

He is survived by his wife, the former Clara Ellen Dignum, who wrote his biography Worthy, in 1961. A son, Peter, and a daughter Mrs. Robin Fawcett also survive.

NEW INITIATIVES against racial injustice in the U.S. were called for Friday night by former vice-president Richard M. Nixon. Speaking to the National Association of Manufacturers in New York he said: "The war in Asia is a limited one with limited means and limited goals. The war at home is a war for survival of a free society."

FAST MOVING

Avalanches may approach the energy of tornadoes and earthquakes as a slide of dry snow may attain speeds of up to about 280 miles an hour.

Amnesia Victim Still Unidentified

Police in Albany, Oregon, still do not know the identity of a man found in a daze there a week ago.

When his picture was carried in local newspapers a Saanich farmer phoned the Times anonymously. He said the man was an ex-soldier who had worked for him in 1964 and his name was Stephen Percy MacDonald.

But when wire services carried the story Mr. MacDonald himself denied it. He lives at Squamish.

Albany police now are checking a lead that may prove their Mr. X to be an Edmonton man.

CARELESS DRIVERS

Careless drivers fined Friday in central court were: Ronald Schiller, 899 Esquimalt, rear end collision, $50; Judith Gorton, 1125 Hillside, hit car, $35, plus $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

IT'S NOT THE MINT BUT BLACKBERRIES

GANGES—It's not the mint sauce that makes the lamb, it's the wild blackberries and Oregon grape, says shepherd Robert Ackerman.

The shepherd, whose grandfather started the flock of sheep 100 years ago, said the famous flavor and texture of Salt Spring Island lamb comes from the diet. His 600 Suffolks run on a range that provides wild herbs and plants, a diet superior to that available to most sheep.

Mr. Ackerman said it's unnatural for lambs to be raised on grass only.

"They like to browse, that's the answer."

He also said the Island climate helps.

"We don't have any snow."

Decision Soon On Teacher Pay

LAKE COWICHAN—Decision of an arbitration board on teachers' salaries in the Lake Cowichan school district will be handed down before the end of this month.

The issue went to arbitration when negotiations collapsed, although the trustees' and teachers' negotiating teams reached a settlement. But the teachers' association would not ratify the agreement.

The board offered to pay the same salaries as paid in Ladysmith, Cowichan and Nanaimo school districts plus differentials of $150 for E scale and $200 for P scale.

Duncan Vote Heavy

DUNCAN—The heaviest vote in many years was indicated by early returns in the city of Duncan and North Cowichan municipal elections.

At 10:30 this morning city hall had recorded 189 votes from a total of 1,734 eligible voters.

At a by-election two years ago the total ballots cast totalled just over 200.

The double duty of electing a mayor and three aldermen seemed to stimulate interest.

The three-way fight for reeve in North Cowichan also pulled out the electors.

South End fire hall had only on vote in the first half hour but polling perked up and in two hours the total was 147.

There were 100 votes cast at the new municipal hall and 107 at Chemainus by 10:30, indicating a heavy poll throughout the area.

The weather was overcast and showery but did not seem to be deterring the voters.

Three-Film Travel Program

Victoria author, photographer and naturalist C. P. "Chess" Lyons will present a three-film travel program at McPherson Playhouse Tuesday and Wednesday.

Billed as "Quest For Adventure" the films include "Outdoor Mexico", "Over The Ice In Garibaldi" and "Rafting the North Thompson."

The Mexico film features the wanderings of several Victorians who took part in a tour of that country which was arranged by Mr. Lyons.

Mr. Lyons worked 20 years for the B.C. parks branch before becoming one of B.C.'s best known private publicists.

He was designer of the Garbage Gobbler devices seen along provincial highways and was involved in creation of the Stop Of Interest signs and the Barkerville historic restoration program.

He is author of several B.C. travel books and one dealing with native flowers and shrubs.

Mr. Lyons has just returned from a lecture and film tour of California and Arizona.

HONORED with a Centennial medal for his contributions as a community-minded citizen over the past 45 years is Wah Quan, operator of the Yee Lun Ark Kee grocery store at 534 Fisgard. Mr. Quan, who lives at 3058 Henderson, owns the store operated under his family's name since 1896.

NANAIMO—A 19-year-old youth was given a one year's suspended sentence and placed on a $500 bond when found guilty of contributing to juvenile delinquency by committing an act of sexual immorality.

The 14-year-old girl involved claimed she had been raped but medical and police evidence indicated no force was used. The youth said the girl had twice propositioned him earlier but he had refused.

He had eaten one of six before being apprehended.

The Beatles' newest album issue, Magical Mystery Tour, finally hit at least one Victoria record stand this week just in time for the Christmas market that the group missed last year.

The album, which was released in conjunction with the Beatles' film—Magical Mystery Tour—contains, besides the LP, a full-color book with photographs of the film.

The film, which is to be aired across the world around New Year's, was the personal project of the Beatles. They devised the format, wrote the original script, did the casting, directed the shooting and edited the finished version.

All the location scenes were shot during a week-long bus tour of the Devon and Cornwall area of southwest England in which the central characters were a bus load of Magical Mystery Tour passengers including John, George, Ringo and Paul.

The album carries six soundtrack recordings, Magical Mystery Tour, Your Mother Should Know, I Am the Walrus, The Fool on the Hill, Flying, and Blue Jay Way, on one side, with five previously issued recordings, All You Need Is Love, Penny Lane, Baby You're a Rich Man, Strawberry Fields Forever, and their newly-released single Hello Goodbye, on the other.

So far 40 countries have bid for the film with the successful bidders likely to spend $1,000,000 to secure the screen rights.

Elvis Presley's latest movie soundtrack Clambake is out on RCA. It's one of his best album efforts so far but, I still think he's getting a bit old to be chasing up and down beaches with bikini-clad chicks.

Lulu can't lose—She has three album releases, all by different companies.

England's Parrot label issued an album, From Lulu—With Love, containing her first hits I'll Come Running, and Shout. Epic has freshly recoreded a collection including To Sir With Love, and she also gets the royal treatment from Fontana which carries the original soundtrack from the movie To Sir With Love.

The Jefferson Airplane are still working on their newest album to be called After Bathing At Baxter's.

One of the largest night club salary deals ever set has been drawn betwen Don Ho and Duke Kahanamoku's nitery in Honolulu. The deal calls for Ho to earn $2 million straight salary plus a percentage of the profits during the next five years.

The contract calls for Don to headline at Duke's for 20 weeks each year with the dates more or less at his option between concert, nightclub and television appearances on the mainland and in Europe.

Not too long ago he got a raise to set his salary at $500,000 a year but this two million extra dollar deal can't fairly be called a raise, can it?

Petula Clark probably the busiest female entertainer in the business, will star in her own TV special next year on April 12.

Group Therapy, a new group out of New York is departing this month for the North Pole to penetrate the last frontier of pop music sources as yet untouched by today's writers and producers.

The expedition will cost an estimated $20,000 and will include, among other things, a probe into the musical cultures of the Angakoks a little known Polar Eskimo tribe believed to have a centuries old musical tradition.

The Blues Project have broken up. Two of the members, Steve Katz and Al Kooper have formed a new group known as Blood, Sweat and Tears.

Local Dancers In Ballet

Fifty dancers, almost half British Columbians, will fill the stage of the McPherson Playhouse, Dec. 18, 19 and 20, when San Francisco's Ballet Celeste presents the complete three act version of The Nutcracker by Tchaikowsky.

The company makes its home in San Francisco and is partly supported by the city through a small tax grant. As a consequence the company is enabled to travel and to keep its ticket prices low.

Three stars from San Francisco will dance the leading roles. They are Laura Brown, Ramon Galindo and Kimberly Graves. All three have been dancers with the famed Bolshoi and Leningrad-Kirov Ballets.

GALA OPENING

After its gala opening of Nutcracker in Victoria the troupe will travel to Vancouver to present the ballet at the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse.

Evening performances at the McPherson will start at 8:30 p.m. and matinees on Tuesday and Wednesday at 2:30 p.m.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lillian Evans Tibbs, 77, probably the first Negro to sing grand opera professionally in the United States, died Thursday after a long illness. Madame Evanti, as she preferred to be known, made her debut in 1925. She was a coloratura soprano.

North Breezes

The three neighbors from Fernwood ended their regular day on the town with a handshake over the dinner. They had settled on their Christmas project.

"This year," said the man seated by the window of our poolside dining room, "we're going to a nursing home. We're going to ask the matron for the names of three patients who don't have visitors often.

"And we're taking them some candy and magazines or maybe some pipe tobacco. But mostly we are just going to sit and talk."

They told our Maitre d', Leslie, that there are patients in every private hospital who have no one. All of them love company. Counting those in boarding homes, there are 2,000 of them in Victoria.

ONE-MAN JURY CAN CAUSE PROBLEMS

Show Shrouded in Rumors

By R. H. GROOMS

Rumors abound about the new show opening Tuesday at 8 p.m., at the Vancouver Art Gallery. It is the B.C. '67 Annual with $1,500 in purchase prizes to be awarded. The works purchased will then become part of the permanent collection of the Vancouver Art Gallery.

Grooms

Yves Gaucher of Montreal, an internationally-known painter and print-maker, served as the one man jury, judge and executioner for the over 400 entries submitted by B.C. artists.

He only selected 10 pieces of sculpture or paintings or their variants (no graphics or crafts were permitted). Herein lies the source of most of the trouble.

When the news leaked out as to how few were chosen and these by no means the biggest or oldest names in B.C. art, the rumors became rampant. As almost the whole $1,500 or more was collected in the $5 entry fees paid by each artist, there was some talk of groups of artists demanding their fees back.

Judging Delayed

The first rumor grew out of the delay in judging the works submitted. Because of some mix-up in the timing of Mr. Gaucher's arrival, the Nov. 11 deadline was extended a few days for 70-80 entries.

This caused quite a number of artists who got their work in on time to complain of unfair advantage.

As over 400 entries were submitted last year and some 90 were chosen, it seemed excessively harsh to see this year's 400 limited to only 10.

The rumor had it that Mr. Gaucher had only chosen five artist's work from the original submission and had to go to three other artist's studios to select additional work to make up even the 10. This certainly cast some serious doubts about the quality of work found in B.C. among all the artists practicing.

Explanation

I telephoned Tony Emery the new Director of the Vancouver Art Gallery to verify the rumors and to try to get an explanation of the events. He assured me that while this meagre selection was certainly galling to the many B.C. artists who had submitted, that there was nothing improper in the selection.

Mr. Emery told me that all the artists who were selected had filled out the proper forms and paid the entry fee, but that in one case of a fragile work that could not easily be moved from the Intermedia Building downtown, Mr. Gaucher had gone down there to judge it.

As Mr. Gaucher was travelling with Mr. Roy Kiyooka, a former B.C. artist with many friends in Vancouver, he had naturally gone around to visit socially, a number of artists in their studios and homes.

Not True

Mr. Emery felt that this was the source of the rumor that Mr. Gaucher had actually gone to artists in their studios to see work not properly submitted and had selected work in this manner. Mr. Emery said this was certainly not true.

As the rumor spread about this unusual procedure, there were many artists who would also have liked Mr. Gaucher to visit their studios and to see what else he may have preferred to the rejected entries.

The third rumor was concerned with the fact that originally there was to be published an illustrated catalogue of the accepted works. But now that there were so few in number there would be no catalogue.

Mr. Emery verified the catalogue idea was abandoned, but added that a combination invitation, announcement of the show and list of awards and entries would be sent out. He felt this would suffice for a catalogue when the show was so small as to be limited to just 10 works.

Reaction

It was also rumored that due to the reaction to Mr. Gaucher's decision, the gallery would distribute a printed statement by Mr. Gaucher defending his judgment. Mr. Emery said this was not true. He informed me that the CBC would broadcast a taped discussion with Mr. Gaucher on Sat. Dec. 16, but it would unfortunately not be available for the opening of the show on Dec. 12.

Mr. Gaucher will not be at the opening himself but Mr. Emery said that in order to dispell any rumors and to answer any questions or complaints about the show, they had planned a discussion-debate on opening night. For the sake of objectivity it will be chaired by Prof. Abe Rogatnick of UBC so that the gallery cannot be accused of trying to rail-road the choices.

The next rumor was that the rejected artists had banded together to have a Salon De Rufuse or Reject Show. This is evidently true, according to Mr. Emery, they have in fact two such shows. One is at Paul Wong's gallery and the other at a private house on 4th St. belonging to Joy Long.

Council Grant

The last rumor has it that under the original arrangements, Mr. Gaucher was being paid by the Canada Council to come from Montreal to judge this show and to give four lectures, one each at UBC, SFU, Uvic, and the Vancouver Gallery.

Mr. Emery verified part of this and said that Mr. Gaucher came early and left before he could do any more than judge the show and make the CBC tape. The discussion-lecture he was to hold with Roy Kiyooka at the Gallery had to be cancelled.

It has always been a risky idea to have a one-man jury. This time the idea seems to have back-fired particularly badly. The one advantage of the one-man jury is that everyone knows who is to blame or praise. The obvious disadvantages for outweigh this.

The compromised judgment and the possibility of variety and levity with a larger jury, where the blame or praise can be dispersed, or at least not so easily pinpointed, is not to be underestimated.

Damage Done

Considering the present state of the fine arts in B.C. and especially the situation in art education in this province, we can ill afford this kind of fiasco. Unfortunately Mr. Emery and his staff at the Vancouver Gallery have to accept the ultimate responsibility of Mr. Gaucher's actions.

The many rumors have already done their damage even where they can be demonstrated to be untrue. The nasty thing about rumors is that long after they have been demolished like a phoenix they rise from the ashes to suggest there may have been a half-truth hidden within all the time.

It now remains for this critic, at least, to judge the merits of the 10 accepted works when the show opens next week. I cannot pretend to suppose that they will be truly representative of B.C. art, nor that they are necessarily the cream of what has been produced by B.C. artists the past few years.

The omission of well known professional artists with long standing reputations like Binning, Shadbolt, Smith, Onley, Bates, Siebner, Ciccimara, Harvey and Dobereiner, et al will assure a very tentative conclusion about B.C. '67 Art as shown in Vancouver this year.

First United Again Presents Night of Carols

For the 20th successive year, First United Church Choir will present its lovely Carols in the Candlelight service in the church on Wednesday, Dec. 13 at 8 p.m.

One of the most enjoyable of the annual Christmas musical events, this program usually includes carols familiar and rare, excerpts from master works written for the Christmas season, spirituals and hymns.

Solos, and often duets, are interspersed between the choral numbers and the candlelit church is customarily filled to capacity.

Before the Cameras

The Bandits of Milan, an adventure film based on a spectacular bank robbery in Milan last September, went before the cameras recently on location in Italy.

New Movie

The Strange Affair, Paramount, Pictures' new motion picture, is a story of the London Metropolitan Police Force and accents modern methods of crime prevention and criminal detection.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

Only three more weeks are left of centennial year and one can't help wondering whether 1968 is going to seem drab, artistically speaking, after the glamour and superactivity of 1967.

There is bound to be something of a let-down in certain areas, but in others there will be a sibilant sound from the drawing of breaths of relief.

Getting back to normal is by no means an unpleasant experience after any festive season. Most parts of Canada could not support on a continuous scale, the 1967 pace in the entertainment-arts field.

It is too early to say how far-reaching the impact of this year may be.

If many more people have been made aware of, and given an appetite for, the good things in our own storehouse as well as from abroad, that would be a valuable residue.

To raise standards and create a demand for a good commodity, to provide challenges, widen horizons, stimulate comparisons—these are things that have permanent value because they teach people to live more fully through awareness and discernment.

Which reminds me that details of one major musical event for 1968 became known this week and plans for it are already well advanced.

Hold Meeting in Victoria

For the first time ever, the Federation of Canadian Music Festivals annual meeting and conference will be held in Victoria.

The 19th such event, it will take place between June 30 and July 4 at the Empress Hotel.

The invitation to come to Victoria was issued by Dr. J. F. K. English at last summer's conference held in Saint John, N.B., it being the turn of either Alberta or British Columbia to host the affair.

Dr. English is general chairman of the special committee which is now at work on the event.

But it is my firm belief that the federation's deliberations are of profound importance to the musical health of the country.

No matter who they may be, critics who unequivocally dismiss the music festival as valueless or indict it as harmful are either nursing a personal grudge, or have failed to take a good look at all aspects of the festival movement.

One of the frequent criticisms—it was even voiced by one of this province's most highly placed (perhaps mistakenly) musical authorities—is that students are kept at one or two pieces for a whole year in an attempt to make sure of a good adjudication.

May Be Poor Festival Material

Well, all I can say is that if a student cannot get a good adjudication without spending an entire year on one or two things to the exclusion of any other music, he is poor festival material and the teacher should recognize the fact.

Listen to what experienced British adjudicators Leon Forrester, Cecil Cope and Nigel Coxe had to say in their reports to the Federation Conference on the 1967 Canadian festivals:

"For me," says Mr. Coxe, "the eagerness, freshness and good spirit of the young performers everywhere across the Dominion was a constant joy, and in some places I heard performances of a beauty and quality which will remain in my mind for a long time.

"The dedication and unbelievable energy and enthusiasm of those responsible for organizing the festivals is beyond belief; and when one sees for oneself the importance of these festivals to performers who often travel hundreds of miles . . . to get the experience they offer, then their true worth and value are unmistakably shown."

And Mr. Coxe concludes: "It was an exciting time to be in Canada and sad to have to part company so quickly with all the kind and generous people I met on my journey. Whether or not Canadiophile exists as a word, nevertheless I am certainly one!"

Most Worthy Musical Enterprise

Dr. Leon Forrester (who did not come to Victoria) winds up his report with this comment:

"One leaves Canada with a feeling of having learnt so much in the course of having enjoyed so much, together with the hope that one has in some small way contributed help and encouragement to what may well be the Dominion's most worthy musical enterprise."

Cecil Cope, who was vocal adjudicator in Victoria last spring, sums up this way:

"The over-all general impression of the tour is one of wonder—at the vastness of the country; the enormous amount of musical talent; the lack, in certain places, of adequate teachers; the unbounded energy and enthusiasm of musicians of all ages; the kindness and warmth of Canadian hospitality.

Mort Sahl Doesn't Like Mort Sahl

By PAUL JESCHKE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Entertainer Mort Sahl perched himself on his familiar stool and denied he walked out on an off-Broadway show which was scheduled to open in New York last weekend.

"That show was not ready to open," he said.

SHOW NOT READY

The spaniel-eyed satirist took to the stage of the Hungry I nightclub to tell newsmen he was "ready to proceed" with the production of Mort Sahl, a political satire review cancelled by producer Michael Brandman after Sahl left New York City and returned to California.

"I did not walk out," Sahl said. "I told Brandman of the progressive difficulties we were encountering and warned him in a registered letter three days before the technical rehearsal that this show was not ready for the public."

Sahl, wearing his well-known baggy sweater and a quip, as usual, on his lips, said director Elaine May "threw out all the production numbers."

"They wanted me to go on and do a monologue," Sahl said. "That's not the way the show was billed and it would't have been fair to the public which plunked down five bucks to see the show. I wasn't about to do a nightclub show in an off-Broadway theatre. That's not what it was supposed to be."

'WASN'T HIDING'

Sahl denied Brandman's claim that he had gone into hiding before the production in the apartment of Playboy publisher Hugh Heffner and then sneaked off to Beverly Hills, Calif., without telling anyone.

Diamond In the Groove

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Most young children love to listen to stories, so many busy parents welcome story-records which enhance their tales with professional readers, musical settings and appropriate sound effects.

One of the older records which has deservedly remained on the market, RCA Victor's Hansel and Gretel (LBV 1024) beautifully reproduces the familiar story as set to Humperdinck's charming music.

The singing is excellent and the characters are all completely believable on this record which can be heard with pleasure over and over again.

• • •

When children enter kindergarten or primary grades, they learn to read stories for themselves, but only those which are fascinating or simple enough, hold their attention.

Dr. Seuss who has more friends among children than almost any educator, has written several books for young readers in which simple words, often monosyllables, are rhymed together and manipulated to make stories.

• • •

Perhaps the most successful, Green Eggs and Ham (Cal 1063), is a dialogue in which Sam tries to persuade the hero to taste green eggs and ham.

He suggests myriad situations in which such food would be palatable and uses words like fox, box,train, rain with constant variations in rhythm on the oft-repeated, familiar words.

• • •

Fox in Socks, for Super Children, is directed toward the child who has just discovered the fun of linguistics.

In series of tongue-twisters and rhythmic word patterns at various speeds, similar simple words are repeated, over and over.

One of the attractions of Dr. Seuss' books is that he dreams up completely credible but incredibly strange creatures with stranger names and even more peculiar characteristics.

The keeper in, If I Ran the Zoo (Cal 1078), describes all the creatures he would collect if he were making his own unusual zoo.

Similar unheard-of creatures inhabit the world of Sleep Book on the reverse side.

Here, a restful reader, in a yawn-rousing voice, describes all things which are at last settling to sleep; meanwhile suggesting that the listener join them. A lullaby with a difference.

Horton the Elephant who hatches the egg on Cal 1013, and Yertle the Turtle and Gertrude McFuzz who cavort on Cal 1035, are animal impersonations of people in miniature.

Of course, several adults have been driven mad by the constant playing of these records in their hearing, but the children who enjoy them so much seem to be immune.

'SOME DAY' ARRIVES FOR LUCY

Every night, she leans across the piano at The Playhouse and asks: "What do you think if some day we should get married?"

Miss Enten, 21, and Scandur, 20, announced this week they will be married in New York City Tuesday, Dec. 26.

WHITE SHEEP OF FAMILY

Lively Comedy Chosen By Country Players

A lively comedy, White Sheep of the Family, by Ian Hay and L. du Garde Peach, is the latest production of the Country Church Players.

It will be seen at St. John's Church Hall, Colwood, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Proceeds from the production will go toward providing a permanent stage for the hall.

At the moment a temporary stage has to be erected for every major production which places considerable strain on stage manager Bill Parker and his crew.

Besides appearing in the play's major role, Mr. Campbell also directs, assisted by Lilian Chambers.

TV THIS WEEK

Is Rene Levesque A Pain in the Neck?

By AL FORREST
Staff Writer

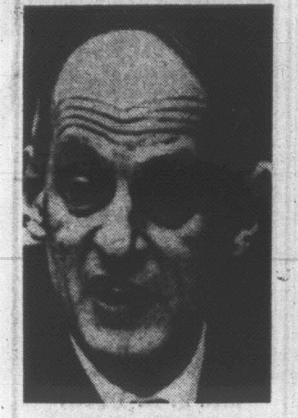
The personality of Rene Levesque continued to dominate television this week as the nation became more and more deeply embroiled in the Quebec problem.

Not that Rene is the official spokesman for anybody. He was all but turfed out of the Quebec Liberal party this fall and forced to sit as an independent member of the Quebec legislature.

He is simply a Quebec Power advocate but an eloquent one.

Commentators rushed to get his views on tape and cameras zoomed in to capture those deep brooding eyes that come to a twinkle when someone notes that his name rhymes with Quebec, or to record his expressive Gaullic shrug if a critic notes that Levesque also rhymes with pain-in-the-neck.

He's not just a colorful rebel. On the screen he projects an image of intensity, humility and sincerity that marks him off from other political radicals who are colorful might have trouble selling used cars. Levesque could empty a lot in 24 hours.



LEVESQUE
. . . ze villain

He is trying to convince his compatriots that they can play Separation Poker and win.

It's a quaint game, and like all poker contests it is 99 per cent bluff.

Levesque prefers to call the game Labor Negotiation.

As he was explaining it to the nation this week, it goes like this:

At the next election a political group will be elected to power in Quebec —led by you-know-who— with a mandate to separate the province from Canada.

Strike notice will be served.

But, Levesque argues, Canada, particularly Ontario, cannot afford to lose markets in Montreal and access through the St. Lawrence seaway.

English Canada, therefore, will bow to all Quebec's demands in exchange for continued access to the French-Canadian market and to keep Canada united.

A strike, he says, won't be necessary. There will be no bankruptcy and disarray. Just gold everywhere.

Ah, but what if ze bluff fails, monsieur?

Then we were told that the truth about the Golden Jet is that he wants out of hockey as quickly as he can so he can make a fortune as an estate farmer and as director of Bobby Hull enterprises.

HULL
. . . all that glitters

For those of us who prefer to think of hockey heroes as milk-drinking church-going citizens who only yearn to set a good example for the kids, it came as a bit of a shock.

Some of us prefer to remember Bobby as the man who stood for one solid hour in Victoria's Memorial Arena this fall signing autographs when he could have been relaxing in the dressing room.

Any man who can score 54 goals in one season can't be all bad.

Musical Circus Again Selected

Due to the outstanding success last year of the circus theme adopted by Solarium Junior League for its annual show, it has been decided once again to produce a musical circus for 1968.

The new edition of Solarium Circus Capers is scheduled for late March at McPherson Playhouse. Directors will be Wally Fletcher, stage, and Gordon Dickie, music. Mrs. D. Adair is the convener.

The organizers plan to use the Solarium chorus and Hi-Steppers but they are looking for vocalists, jugglers, new variety and possibly live animal acts.

Anyone interested and able to present good acts such as the above should phone either 477-4308 or 383-9477 to arrange auditions.

'Funny Feeling Singing With Dead Father'

By VERNON SCOTT

Williams Sr., one of the country music's all-time greats, died when Hank Jr., was only four years old.

But due to electronic gimmickry, the original tape recordings of Hank Sr. have been lifted from the orchestral backgrounds and rerecorded with Hank Jr. singing harmony with a father he only barely recalls, and with new orchestration.

Titled "Hank Williams Jr. and Sr. in a Recording Miracle" and "Hank Williams Jr. and Sr. Again," the albums have found considerable success with the country music cult. So much so, in fact, a third album is being cut.

WRITTEN BY SR.

All the numbers on the three albums were written by Hank Sr.

It is significant that Hank Jr. gives himself first billing on the albums.

He is a cock-sure kid of 18 who is starring in his first movie, a Sam Katzman quickie, "A Time To Sing."

Williams Jr. sees nothing eerie in singing harmony with his late father.

"It's sort of a funny feeling," Jr. said. "But I'm glad to be able to do it. All my records are cut in Nashville. Wouldn't think of recording anywhere else. They got the best musicians there in the world for my kind of music."

Junior, tall, blond and broad shouldered, hopes to establish himself as firmly with folk and country fans as did his father.

"Once you become a country music star you're made for life," he said. "You can cut any kind of record and people will buy it. Singers like Hank Snow, Webb Pierce, Hank Thompson, Johnny Cash and Faron Young have been going strong for years. They make a fortune."

Tastes may change with popular music, according to junior, and modern, electrified groups come and go. But country music, which he describes as true folk music, will march into eternity.

This is Hank Jr.'s second trip to Hollywood. The first was to dub George Hamilton's singing voice—in "Your Cheatin' Heart," the film biography of Hank Williams Sr. four years ago.

Hank is a song writer as well as a singer himself. Four of the numbers for his MGM movie were the result of his own tunesmithing.

Camelot, Yule Fare By Bastion

The gifted writers of My Fair Lady and Brigadoon, Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, wove music and lyrics around T. H. White's brilliant book about King Arthur — The Once and Future King, and created a magical musical — Camelot.

Camelot, which will be Bastion Theatre's Christmas production, opening Dec. 26 at McPherson Playhouse, is magical in more ways than one.

There is Merlyn the Magician, who lives backwards through time, the witch Morgan le Fey who is persuaded by her wicked nephew Mordred to cast a spell on Arthur, and the nymph Nimue, who is Merlyn's fate.

There is even a miracle, brought about by Lancelot's purity of heart.

LOST FAITH

And when Arthur, forced into battle, has lost faith in his ideal of the Knights of the Round Table, there is the young boy, Tom of Warwick, ready to carry on the legend when Arthur tells him — "Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot."

Recreating the dream-come-true English countryside where by royal decree the rain may never fall till after sundown, and summer lingers through September, are Anthony Jenkins as Arthur, Vanessa Ramsay Lax as Guenevere, and Bill Hosie as Lancelot.

And with them in this "happily-ever-aftering" haven are Stuart Kent as Merlyn, Hugh Henderson as Pellinore, complete with old English sheepdog Ramona L. Henderson as Pellinore's dog 'Horrid', Markyta Mares as Morgan le Fey, Glenn MacDonald as Mordred, Nancy Watt as Nimue.

OTHERS IN CAST

Camelot runs Dec. 26 through Jan. 6 at McPherson Playhouse with evening performances at 8:30, and three matinees at 2 p.m. Dec. 26, Dec. 30 and Jan. 6.

The box office opens Dec. 12.

Shrewd, Penetrating Sketches of War Personalities

THE BLAST OF WAR, by Harold Macmillan, Macmillan Company of Canada Ltd., $11.95.

Reviewed by William Rodney, Department of History, Royal Roads Military College.

It's a long way to Tipperary, and it's a very different war which Mr. Macmillan describes in the second volume of his autobiography.

During the 1914-1918 conflict he experienced the blood bath of trench warfare. The shock of surviving that experience, together with his entry into politics, is described in a preceding work.

At the beginning of the Second World War however, Mr. Macmillan found himself too old to fight, and the prospect of observing action from the sidelines as a backbencher "seemed flat and uninteresting".

Instead, through friends, and with encouragement from Winston Churchill, he became a member of a committee formed to find ways of assisting Finland which, on Nov. 30, 1939, was brutally attacked by the U.S.S.R. From that modest beginning, and through a combination of ability, fortune, and the old boy network he quickly became involved in the war effort.

Mr. Macmillan's experiences fall into two major parts. The first division covers his work in the Ministry of Supply, a many-headed administrative monster which was responsible for arming the British nation.

There, for almost two years, he served as Parliamentary Secretary under ministers as diverse in talent and ability as Herbert Morrison, Sir Andrew Duncan, and Lord Beaverbrook. "... I used to say that with one a Cockney, another a Lowland Scot and the third a Canadian, I never heard a word of English spoken correctly from the Minister's chair."

MACMILLAN

With reorganization completed and large scale production co-ordinated Mr. Macmillan was promoted and transferred to the Colonial Office as Under-Secretary.

●

Unexpectedly, the change brought him into the second and most significant phase of his war-time career, appointment as Minister of State at Allied headquarters in Algiers, and direct involvement in the political-diplomatic side of the conflict.

Rapidly, but with that touch of gingerly reserve which is his personal hallmark, he was caught up in the preparations for the Mediterranean campaign, the first and, as he rightly notes, the most successful expression of Anglo-American co-operation.

The problems of working with an ally who, ostensibly, spoke the same language, were considerable enough.

Washington was often puzzling and sometimes difficult, but its obtuseness never compared with French intransigence.

From the start of Mr. Macmillan's tour there loomed over the miscellany of French colonial administrators and military men the storklike figure of Charles de Gaulle whose inconsistencies even then perturbed, exasperated, and angered many of those who had to deal with him.

As the war in North Africa ended and the Allies swept into Italy, French problems receded and new considerations in Greece and Yugoslavia, complicated by the Soviet Union's complete distrust of everyone and everything, took up Mr. Macmillan's time and energies.

While this is a detailed overlong book often tedious in style, its pages are illuminated by shrewd and, at times, penetrating sketches of the many personalities encountered by the author during the war years.

'Never Heard a Word Of English Spoken Correctly'

Thus, Herbert Morrison is described as "tough, imaginative, and resilient", while Beaverbrook emerges as an energetic pirate, "something of an enigma" but always "exciting".

●

The parade of great figures becomes more impressive as Mr. Macmillan draws nearer to the heart of policy making and decision taking. Churchill appears and reappears; Roosevelt makes his dramatic impact at Casablanca; Vyshinsky is remembered for his bon mots: "Democracy is like wine. It is all right if taken in moderation". And, of course, the military appear in quantity: Alexander, Eisenhower, Giraud, Bedell Smith, Wilson.

●

Although the personal appraisals and summaries of situations are fascinating, this volume is equally important for another reason: it reveals the cool cast of Mr. Macmillan's own personality.

When opportunity permits, Mr. Macmillan becomes a tourist putting his classical education to use while browsing amongst the ruins of North Africa, Italy, and Greece.

The war, except for an occasional direct entry, seems far away. It was, indeed, a very different war from that which Mr. Macmillan fought in 1914-1918 or, for that matter, which many of us experienced between 1940-1945.

●

By the same token it was also excellent training for a very proper future prime minister. A good book and a suitable introduction to what should be the most significant of Mr. Macmillan's recollections, volume III.

FAILURE KEY WORD

Love Adds Zest To Riel Story

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

The Magnificent Failure is a novel based on the events of the Riel Rebellion in Saskatchewan in 1885. It fictionalizes the events, beginning with the Metis' last great buffalo hunt of 1884 and ending with Gabriel Dumont's flight into exile following the Battle of Batcohe.

The incidents of the rebellion are brought to life by Mr. Lutz' historical research, his ability to describe the sweep of the prairies north of Saskatoon through all the changing seasons, and his imagination, capable of recreating the frontier life of the Metis settlements of a hundred years ago.

Perhaps the main objection to The Magnificent Failure arises from the extreme simplicity of Mr. Lutz' technique. To the recorded incidents and characters of the rebellion he adds a fictional hero and heroine; hence a love story is superimposed on a tale of adventure.

●

Janvier Ouellette and Reine McIntosh are the fictional characters painted against the backdrop of historical fact, but Mr. Lutz is never quite able to breathe into them the breath of life.

Janvier remains always a mere shadow of Gabriel Dumont, and Reine remains too consistently inconsistent ever to develop into a fully rounded character.

Their love affair provides variety and a change of pace for the novel, but it never really comes alive.

In spite of the weaknesses of A Magnificent Failure, the book is interesting, and though not particularly well written, it does maintain a rapid narrative pace. Clearly, but without getting too involved in detail, it sketches the basis for Metis dissatisfaction with the Federal Government of Canada.

The Metis misunderstood and mistrusted Ottawa's plans for surveying the west, a step necessary before the planned settlement of the area.

Perhaps General Middleton is treated a little unkindly, for he is shown as an unimaginative, bad-tempered military martinet, but then history has little good to say of the man.

In his treatment of Louis Riel, Mr. Lutz has also been true to historical fact, even though it means being uncharitable to human character.

He is the half-mad mystic, a dreamer of dreams whose vision of the emancipation of the Metis is confused with an exaggerated idea of his own role as a political and spiritual Messiah. His own confusion and lack of energy in pursuing the struggle he mistakes for the manifest will of God. Passively he pursues the path that leads to defeat and death.

It is not Riel who is the magnificent failure of Mr. Lutz' novel, but rather Gabriel Dumont.

Dumont has never received his fair share of attention from the historians, but in these pages he appears for what he was, a man of action and a born leader.

●

He acted as captain in the great buffalo hunts; he gathered the Metis in opposition to Ottawa; he travelled to Montana to persuade Riel to return to Canada and lead his people. Dumont carried out the military campaign with vigor and imagination. His one weakness was a too intense loyalty to Louis Riel and a consequent tendency to defer Riel's judgment in matters where Riel was unfit to make decisions.

Thus The Magnificent Failure traces the rebellion as it runs its unhappy course.

If it is not a great, heroic or tragic story, it certainly is a very human one, told with a sympathetic understanding of both the events and the main characters involved.

For readers who like their history spiced with a little dash of fiction, here is a work that is both entertaining and informative.

Disrespectful Poems Lovingly Collected

THE BLASTED PINE (Revised and Enlarged Edition): An Anthology of Satire, Invective, and Disrespectful Verse. Edited by F. R. Scott and A. J. M. Smith. MacMillan, $2.95.

Reviewed by R. G. Lawrence

Who would have thought that 143 satiric or disrespectful poems had ever been written in this solemn country? Yet the careful reader of the two prefaces will discover the suggestion that the poems herein have been selected from many others of similar nature available to the editors. Moreover, it is a comfort to know that at least 38 new satiric poems have been written in Canada since the first edition of this book was published in 1957.

●

So thorough have Scott and Smith been in their research that the wide-ranging collection might perhaps serve as a frivolous history of Canadian poetry. Some of the disrespectful verses go back a hundred years or more, but poems like "Damn Yankees 1830," "The Prince's Visit 1860," "The City of the End of Things," or "Winter in Lower Canada" don't prove much except that four poets once felt strongly about a variety of subjects.

●

The best of the satiric verses are the recent ones, organized under such provocative headings as True Patriot Love, Solid Citizens, Indigenous Throstles.

Eighteen of the 143 poems were written by either Smith or Scott, but the reader will find as well several contributions from James Reaney, Earl Birney, Irving Layton, Raymond Souster, among others. (Not everybody knows that Stephen Leacock wrote at least two satiric poems, both of them very dated.)

●

The volume includes such splendid Canadian humorous classics as "Anglo-Saxon Street," "The Canadian Authors Meet," "Political Meeting," and "A Psalm of Montreal."

To quote from each of these would give pleasure to some readers and offense to others; however, two short poems must suffice to illustrate the flavour of the book:

A native of Kingston, Ont.
—two grandparents Canadian and still living.

His complexion florid as a maple leaf in late autumn,
for three years he attended
Oxford.

Now his accent
makes even Englishmen wince, and feel
unspeakably colonial.
(Irving Layton,
"Anglo-Canadian")

McLuhan put his telescope to his ear.
What a lovely smell, he said,
we have here.

COOK BOOK GIFT

Offer Rum Balls This Christmas

Here is a selection of new gift books to suit a variety of tastes. The books are outstanding not just as works of reference or sources of information but as beautiful objects in themselves.

The reviewer only had time to cook (and eat) Easy Rum Balls, Baked Prune Whip and Skillet Chews but declared the results highly satisfactory. Mouth-watering color illustrations look exotic but the recipes are practical. A working tool that is also beautiful and real value for money.

The Chairman of Cruft's International Dog Show traces the lineage of the modern dog and edits commentaries on the background and present status of over 200 different breeds. Highlight of the book is a magnificent gallery of 128 full-page color photographs by Sally Ann Thompson, who travelled widely to catch champion dogs in their appropriate settings and characteristic poses.

The Art of Flower Arrangement, by Beverley Nichols. Collins, $13.50.

A far cry from the usual how-to-do-it manual, this book explores the history of flower arrangements in art, from Roman mosaics to Renaissance paintings, eighteenth century shell ornaments, Tiffany vermeil and Faberge jewels. The familiar touches are there too, in Japanese arrangements and Constance Spry.

Beverley Nichols' prose become florid, but there are hosts of entertaining anecdotes along the way and many practical hints. The book is to be treasured for the illustrations alone.

Nature's Paradise, by Jen and Des Bartlett. Collins, $21.50.

A book to appeal to photographers, natural historians or geographers and with something to interest the whole family, this is picture study of the wildlife and scenery of Africa.

Photographs by Des Bartlett give intimate close-ups of fish, animals and birds and panoramic views of their surroundings. An exciting chapter describes Operation Noah which rescued animals from the flooding of the Kariba Dam.

Stamps: Their Lure and Lore, by Ken Conoley. Longmans, $6.95.

The stamp columnist for the Montreal Star has created a work relatively free of the technical jargon of stamp collecting. It concentrates instead on interesting anecdotes connected with individual issues. Train wrecks and beauty queens, advertising and assassinations, these and many more topics as they are relevant to stamps are discussed in an amusing and informative manner.

Eskimo Masks, Art and Ceremony, by Dorothy Jean Ray. McClelland and Stewart, $15.00.

An impressive and comprehensive study of the origins, symbolism and ceremonial aspects of the Eskimo mask. In her learned text, anthropologist Dorothy Jean Ray explores the relationship between Shaman and the Mask, the use of the mask in dances and festivals and their archeological-historical relationships. Fifty-one photographs by Alfred A. Blaker.

Theatre, ballet and opera productions are enumerated and accompanied by an excellent selection of photographs and brief critical essays on the state of Canadian theatre.

We have long needed this kind of reference guide and it is to be hoped that it will become an annual directory. Volume II, on the 1966-67 season, is due to appear in the spring of 1968.

Overstates 'No Meddling' Case

Reviewed by Jakob S. deVilliers

The author, an American professor of international politics, set himself the task of investigating the historical background to the Rhodesian crisis and the motives, aims and actions of those involved in it.

The results are recorded in this well-written essay, which is worth reading whatever the extent of the readers' knowledge or the slant of his prejudices.

The author exposes the ineptitude of successive British governments, the hypocrisy of his own government and the malice of many others in the United Nations but he tends to overstate the case for non-interference with the Ian Smith regime.

He de-emphasizes the primary responsibility of Britain in Rhodesia, namely the protection of the native peoples against discriminatory laws.

He correctly points out that in the 40 years of Rhodesian self-government no Rhodesian legislation was ever vetoed by Britain but he apparently does not know that past Rhodesian governments secretly submitted proposed discriminatory legislation to Britain for advance approval, and abandoned it if disapproved.

It was to remove this constitutional obstacle that Ian Smith rejected British sovereignty and his parliament is currently legislating apartheid illegaly into Rhodesia.

Adoption Rules Easing Rapidly

Most People Can Become Adoptive Parents—U.S. View

A soaring increase in children for adoption has led the United States to accept increasingly flexible guidelines in the search for adoptive parents.

Adoption attitudes and practices have changed radically in the past 10 years and the system may not be recognizable two decades from now, Myron R. Chevlin of New York told about 250 people at the McPherson Playhouse Friday night.

"We are saying increasingly that most people can become adoptive parents," said the assistant director of the Child Welfare League of America.

A rigid screening system from the past is giving way to more flexibility on the questions of adoptive parents' ages, years of marriage, whether the mother works and whether each family should be limited in the number of children placed with them.

Keynote Speaker

Mr. Chevlin was the keynote speaker in advance of a panel discussion, the first item in a three-day program to probe B.C.'s adoption machinery.

Adopting parents, older adopted persons, social workers and social welfare department personnel will join in discussion groups today and Sunday in what Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell terms "an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation."

Object of the first-of-its-kind conference, explained the minister, is to examine what the adoption service has done, is doing now and what it might do better in the future.

Reviewing trends in adoption, Mr. Chevlin said it is essential for workers in the field to keep an open mind on procedures and have the courage to discard old pet beliefs where they are no longer valid.

The situation has see-sawed in the U.S., he said, from 15 to 25 years ago when there were 10 applications for every child to now, when there are more children than homes for them.

Continuing Problem

A continuing problem is the plight of hard-to-place children, those with physical faults, emotional disturbances, of mixed race or in family groups of two or more.

The number of unmarried mothers is continuing to rise, partly due to increasing population, and more and more of them are not giving up their children for adoption.

Should agencies be taking another look at their policies and perhaps expanding their counselling services for such people?

On inter-racial adoptions he said one worry expressed is that because the child is different he will suffer emotional disturbance because he is not able to "pattern" himself after his parents.

But the general assumption is that it is better to place a child with parents of a different race than have him go without parents during childhood.

Who Should Decide?

Another open issue: who should make the decisions on adoptions?

It is not a private business, Mr. Chevlin suggested.

Because it involves decisions which cannot be taken lightly, the community appoints agents.

While private agencies have done good work, a point in favor of public agencies is that not one but several people decide the crucial questions and the agency is responsible for them.

An experiment is under way in the U.S. called Arena (Adoption Resource Exchange of North America) to see whether state, provincial or national boundaries can be eliminated in the search for adoptive homes, he said.

Under it, Indian children on crowded reserves are being placed in far-off cities, away from regional prejudices. Americans would like Canadians to co-operate in this study.

More Single Parents

Another example of loosening restrictions on adoptive parents:

A Los Angeles County agency has placed 42 children with women alone — widows and sometimes single women but only where they are living in "extended family" situations, that is, not alone but with relatives.

If this policy is valid, it raises the question of whether agencies should be trying to persuade unmarried mothers to give up their children, he suggested.

"No one is more painfully aware of our limitations than we are . . . this is a time to seek understanding and support from the community . . . the children are waiting."

New Council To Study Bureau Closure

NORTH COWICHAN — Municipal council members expressed regret Wednesday at the indefinite closure of the tourist bureau in Duncan.

But Coun. George Whittaker said, "We should be assured those people in the tourist business are making a reasonable contribution to the chamber before council starts taking up the slack."

The chamber reported to council the closure was forced on it because of lack of funds.

Coun. Gerry Smith said 90 per cent of the chamber revenue was spent on maintaining the tourist bureau.

He said, "I'm surprised how many local people as well as tourists use the bureau facilities and closing the office will do great harm to the district."

He said, "If we get involved in an active way in keeping the bureau going we would be speaking in terms of $1,000."

Police Youth Band Set for Big Day

By PETE LOUDON

There's a deliciously dreadful tension building for three boys of the Victoria City Police Youth Band.

Sunday the band gives its Christmas concert at McPherson Playhouse and George Gerrard, Don Eby and Jon Magrath have been slated for solo performances.

"Believe me, they're nervous," said band director Wilfred Boyce today.

George plays the flute, Don the oboe and Jon the trumpet. Each of them has to stand there on the stage in front of the band, in the loneliest spot in the world.

Don wanted to play from his chair in the ranks. Jon, who has been asking the bandmaster for a year for this chance has now become silent. George suddenly has doubts about being "the hottest flautist."

But director Boyce, a flight-lieutenant training officer at Canadian Forces Base School of Music, says this is a normal state and soon set right by warm audience. He says the has confidence the whole band and the Amity Singers, who share the billing, will give Victoria a show to be remembered.

The 42-member band, comprised of boys and girls aged 13 to 21, is trying to raise funds for a summer junket to Portland. A successful concert also will strengthen hopes that police sponsors will be able to reach out with a beginner's group soon.

To date all youngsters in the band have been recruited only when they had previous training. When the band can take them with no previous training it will be fulfilling one of the functions originally planned—offering the world of music to youngsters in need of a gainful pursuit, says the director.

The band was founded three years ago and has since become a welcome feature in police blue uniforms at parades and local celebrations.

PAYING DUES

Financially it's been touch and go, the city helping, some private donors lending aid and each member paying dues to combat operational costs.

It needs a healthy boost. Supporters and band lovers can get tickets to the Sunday 2:30 p.m. event from McPherson box office or any band member.

Different Rules for Jubilee?

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

By the time most readers get this far in tonight's Times many a fateful municipal election decision will already have been made.

Hume

We won't know that decision for a few hours yet, but within those tiny ballot boxes the trend will already have been well established.

If it isn't yet 8 p.m. there is still time to make your contribution to those trends—or to change them slightly.

Should you have decided that you won't vote, please keep your Monday morning complaints about civic politics to yourself.

●

I made my forecast on the four front-runners in Victoria a couple of weeks ago and at this late date see no reason to change the call.

In the same column I forecast the winners of the various reeveship contests, and again see no reason to change.

I shall not repeat the names here lest I'm accused of giving unfair advantage, but they are a matter of newspaper record and I'm stuck with them now.

For those who agree with my call that only one incumbent in Victoria will lose his seat and that only one chief magistrate is in danger of losing, I pass on this sobering thought on my ability as a forecaster.

I called Ottawa to beat Hamilton in the east, Calgary to beat Regina in the west and Regina to beat Hamilton in the Grey Cup final.

And that, friends, is about as consistent as a man can get when it comes to naming winners.

A few weeks ago the Times touched off a bitter hassle in hospital circles by anticipating some of the recommendations of the Agnew survey on hospital and health services.

Charges and counter-charges flew across the city with the officials of St. Joseph's bearing the brunt of the harsh words and being accused, unfairly I might add, of feeding information to the press which should have been kept under wraps.

The result of an emergency meeting of hospital authorities was a decision that from here on in all would be sweetness and light, all would gather around the conference table from time to time and confide as brothers.

Which makes his outburst to the press earlier this week, to say the least, a little bewildering.

A short memo to one of the more talkative aldermanic candidates and an incumbent at that: we noticed that on Friday you were still driving your car around decorated with a bumper card stating "re-elect . . . . ." in direct violation of the Municipal Act which bans advertising of any kind on the day preceding an election.

We overlooked your oversight rather than have a scream of "foul" rending the air. So, for your information, sir, did your rival at the polls.

A charge could have been laid and a fine of $100 imposed.

But it's the Christmas season and charity rides high in our hearts.

And now, as we go to bed with another weekend edition, we can only hope that you all voted wisely for men and women with proven qualities of leadership and wise and temperate minds.

All the signs point to a tough year ahead, a year in which the steady hand will be required, the open mind and a quality of compromise which has rarely been demanded before.

To the winners throughout the area, good luck.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Negative Signs In Appearance

By FRITS ROOS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices were mixed on Canada's major stock markets this week as declines in the final sessions wiped out earlier gains. Trading was moderate.

Brokers felt markets reflected a slowdown in the economy.

"There are lots of negative signs. We can expect further cuts in dividends and the three-year capital spending boom is eroding," one analyst said.

He expected markets to continue at their current pace for at least the next six months. "The glamour market is out," he said.

A broker said there was still selected buying, especially by institutions which had lots of money waiting to be invested. He said investors are on the lookout for such stocks as Inco which had still additional earning potential.

INCO UP

Inco, which sold at a high of 127, moved up 2⅞ to 126 at Toronto. Alcan too had a good week with a gain of 1⅝ to 27⅜.

But Cominco, which announced a 10-cent cut in quarterly dividends, fell 2¾ to 26 and Noranda 1¼ to 50¾.

The week's highflyer at Toronto was Fraser Companies which soared 4⅜ to 22 at the news it is holding exploratory takeover talks with Continental Can of Canada. A recent takeover bid on Fraser by Price Co. was unsuccessful.

Jefferson Lake [illegible] speculation of a sulphur price increase. Chrysler, which completed a new labor contract, moved up 2⅛ to 60⅞ and Rothmans gained 2 points to 26 following an increase in the price of cigarettes.

Dosco sold at a high of 10¾ and closed at 10, up 1⅛, as the Nova Scotia House agreed to the takeover of the company's Sydney, N.S., steel mill.

Neon Products, one of the most active industrials with a 1½ to 10⅜ after selling at a high of 11¼.

CPR DOWN

On the negative side, CPR fell 1¾ to 57¾, Massey-Ferguson 1¼ to 16¼, Algoma Steel 1¼ to a low of 19, Moore Corp. 1 point to 30 and Bell Telephone ⅝ to 44.

Consolidated Bathurst dropped 2⅜ to 22, CIL 1¾ to 13¾, Dominion Textile 1 point to 17¼ and Chemcell ⅞ to 9, all closing at new lows. Canada Cement slipped 2½ to 27.

At Montreal, Fraser climbed 4⅛ to 22, Alcan 1⅞ to 27⅜, and Scott LaSalle 1 point to 40. CPR and Canada Cement fell 2 points each to 57⅞ and 28.

The western oils advance slackened off after the group index hit an all-time high of 225 points early in the week.

There were relatively small retreats by heavily weighted stocks, but others carried on the boom, several hitting highs.

Canadian Gridoil was up ¼ to 15¼, Canadian Export Gas 2.10 to 8.05, Husky 1⅞ to 26⅛, and Chieftain Development 1 point to 10.

French Pete gained 1.05 to 7.25, Fargo 95 cents to a high of 6.25, United Cano 85 cents to a high of 5.45 and Canadian Homestead 60 cents to 5.35.

CITES RUMOR

An analyst said the gains of Gridoil, Export Gas and Canso mainly resulted from rumors about a successful drilling by Imperial Oil in the Meander River area of Northwestern Alberta where the three companies also hold acreage.

Dome Pete was off 1¾ to 56⅜, Hudson's Bay Oil 1 point to 44¾ after selling at a high of 46¾ and Scurry-Rainbow ⅝ to 44.

Brokers expected the current boom in oils to continue.

An analyst pointed at new discoveries in south-central Saskatchewan, recent activities in central Alberta's Sour Gas Trend and proposed activities in Alberta's Foothills area.

In addition, the U.S. appeared to edge toward a continental oil supply policy, considerably improving the position of Canadian companies.

BASE METALS SLIP

Base metals continued to slide. Denison fell 4 points to 75, Roman Corp., whose chief asset is Denison shares, 2½ to 24½, Hollinger ⅞ to 26¼ and Rio Algom and Hudson Bay Mining ¾ each to 33¼ and 56½.

Denison dropped 2¾ to 75¾ at Montreal.

Gold Fever Poses World Trade Blow

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Gold fever, now sweeping the world, brings with it the threat of a collapse in world trade. A lot will depend on the weapons the United States employs to protect its shrinking gold stockpile from French and other raids.

There are several reasons for the roaring demand for gold: The spreading view that paper currency cannot be trusted, that the American dollar is overvalued in terms of gold and that there is a serious imbalance in the over-all post-war monetary structure.

This crumbling of monetary stability, on which the terms of world trade are based, was dramatically illustrated by the sudden decision forced on Britain to devalue its currency.

Recurring foreign trade deficits meant that large amounts of British currency were floating around the world. When the world lost faith with the exchange rate and demanded other currency instead, Britain soon found that her foreign currency cupboard was bare. She cut the value of the pound.

HAS GOLD FORTUNE

Now many countries, including France, believe the American dollar, which also is floating around the world in large volume, is overvalued. France is one of those countries demanding gold instead of U.S. dollars. France now holds a huge fortune in gold, apparently concluding the official gold price may soon be forced up sharply.

The world's most important gold market is in London, run by five merchant bankers headed by N. M. Rothschild and Sons. Their main client is the Bank of England which, until France withdrew in June, represented a pool made up of eight countries—U.S., Britain, West Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, The Netherlands and France.

These countries agreed to provide a percentage of legitimate market demands for gold. The U.S. portion was 50 per cent before French withdrawal and now it may be 59 per cent, to cover the French portion.

The pool was designed to stabilize the world market, which, in addition to legitimate demands by governments and central banks, also is affected by outside pressures by gold hoarders. All the pressures are growing. The upset caused by French withdrawal from the pool is increased by speculation that Belgium and Italy also might wish to withdraw.

Most pool members are reported to have assured the U.S. they do not plan to embarrass the American government by demanding more gold for their U.S. currency holdings at this crucial time. The American gold stockpile has been reduced by about $10,000,000,000 in post-war years—with France absorbing about one-third of that amount. The stockpile now totals about $12,900,000,000. But of that amount, $10,000,000,000 are required to back American currency.

To withstand the French onslaught, the U.S. could free all of the gold for world sale at the official price of $35 that would keep the market satisfied for a fairly long period. Or it can increase the price to attract more gold to the U.S.—or slash imports to bring American trade into balance and thus suck up loose American dollars around the world.

Bank Windup Cleared by Court

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Friday paved the way for the Bank of Western Canada to wind up its affairs.

In a judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Ronald Martland, the court said it agreed with the Manitoba Court of Appeal that bank shareholders acted correctly in voting Sept. 14 to wind up the bank's affairs.

Toronto financier Sinclair Stevens and the Canadian Finance and Investments Ltd. brought a motion to the Supreme Court Monday arguing that the shareholders acted illegally. They said only Parliament had the authority to approve a solvent bank closing its doors.

The Manitoba Court of Appeal in its judgment said banks can go out of business under the Winding Up Act.

In his one-paragraph judgment, Mr. Justice Martland said he agreed.

Lawyers for Mr. Stevens and CFI said it took a special act of Parliament to set up a chartered bank. The only way for a solvent bank to wind up was to apply to Parliament," they said.

Since the Bank of Western Canada had never opened its doors for business, there was no way for it to become insolvent, they argued.

They also said bank shareholders can act only by bylaw and not by resolution. The decision by sharholders to wind up had been by a resolution, they said.

Lawyers for the majority of sharholders said all of the arguments advanced in the Supreme Court had been heard and rejected by the Manitoba court.

They said a majority of stockholders voted in September to wind up the bank. They were entitled to get their money back as soon as possible since the shareholders could make better use of their money that have it tied up during the legal battle.

Workers Demand Assistance

KIMBERLEY (CP)—A group of 22 workers and wives Friday demanded assistance for their families from the International Woodworkers of America and the provincial government because the men claim they are blocked from their jobs at a pulp mill by IWA pickets.

The men, employees of the strike-bound Skookumchuk Pulp Mill, took their demands to welfare officer John Hermison. When told there was no legal aid that could be given, a delegation telephoned the welfare department in Victoria. They were promised an investigation.

Final Dividend

MONTREAL—The board of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., Friday declared a final dividend for 1967 of 20.06 cents per outstanding common share.

BUSINESS VIEWS

'Surplus Day' Declared by Bank

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Kent

It isn't often a bank gives anything away, but with tougher competition, the spirit of Christmas coming over us, and the ever-present factor of human error, the Royal Bank of Canada has declared for all its clients a surplus day in 1968.

In one of the most charming hang-ups ever to emanate from the usually presbyterian confines of a Canadian chartered bank, the Royal is distributing its customary white, blue and gold calendar with a bonus 31 days in September.

Of course they blamed it on the printers, but instead of demanding a withdrawal the bank affixed to each calendar a brief apology and a small, red exclamation mark to stick over the error.

And if customers have no objection to 31 days in their Septembers (although the next page has Oct. 1 overlapping) the bank suggests this edition may be "a real collector's item."

One thing is certain: there are never enough bank calendars to go around at the best of times. This year the Royal is going to run short at record speed.

The fat capital gain withheld from Pyramid Mining Co. Ltd., shareholders pending a federal tax ruling will be distributed early next year, coming in three forms: cash, a share of Pine Point Mines Ltd., and a share of Coronet Mines Ltd., in which Pyramid is a major shareholder.

For each 10 shares of Pyramid, the company will issue the Pine Point share, currently worth $49.50-$49.75; the Coronet share, quoted around 70 cents, plus about $4.20 cash.

The plan is subject to shareholder approval and a meeting has been called for Jan. 12.

Pyramid won its appeal to the tax people who had earlier counted profit from the sale of property to Pine Point as taxable income.

Demand for soft drink in Western Canada is pushing Dominion Glass Co. Ltd., to extra fast expansion of its manufacturing operations in Burnably and at Redcliff, Alta., a suburb of Medicine Hat—the gas city.

New installation was made in the Redcliff plant this fall, enabling a 20 per cent production improvement.

The company had already announced plans for a 50 per cent improvement in production at its Burnaby plant and now says it will spend another $5 million.

Dominion supplies a high proportion of glass bottles for the soft drink and brewing industries and for miscellaneous needs in the food packing industry.

American consumer buying patterns of the last 10 years have been studied in detail by the investment management department of Calvin Bullock.

The most astonishing increase in spending over the period 1956-1966 was in the field of investment, reflecting the bullish stock markets of the last decade.

There was a 291 per cent jump in what Americans spent on brokerage charges and investment counsel, the figure leaping from $631 million to $2.465 billion.

Total personal consumption expenditures went up in the period 72 per cent to $465.946 billion. All but two of the 11 categories showed improvement of at least 52 per cent, while the two which dropped—motion picture admissions 24 per cent off and railroad fares (excluding commuters) 42 per cent down—accurately reflect changes in habit.

Airline fares went up 157 per cent; radio, TV, record and musical instrument purchases 140 per cent, and books and maps 134 per cent. The house-building boom probably accounts for a 92 per cent jump in gas and electricity consumption.

O'Keefes Might Find Old Touch In Open Spaces

By DOUG PEDEN

What price glory?

Ask the Baltimore Orioles, who demolished the Dodgers in the 1966 World Series and then stumbled aimlessly around the second division in this year's American League race.

Ask B.C. Lions, who won the Grey Cup in 1964 and ever since have been a flock of frustrated and fangless felines.

Ask Victoria O'Keefes, Pacific Coast Soccer League champions and winners of the Kennedy Cup international tournament last season, who are taking their lumps this time around the coast kicking circle.

Although some teams have made winning a habit after reaching the top, collapses after championship years have always been a part of the wacky and wonderful world of sport.

However, each crash produces a confusion of theories and if you ask 12 people for reasons you'll probably get a dozen different answers.

Local fitba' patrons are among the best at grandstand coaching and many feel O'Keefes are still suffering from the self-satisfaction that comes with a triumphant campaign.

Although some smugness was probably inevitable after finally making arrogant Vancouver officials eat crow, this shouldn't have been a lingering malady with O'Keefes.

When coach Frank Grealy opened training sessions this season, the ingredients appeared there for blending an even better club than the 1966-67 edition. With several talented newcomers—youthful Victorian Brian Robinson and former English players Peter Wilson, Dick Joyce, Peter Wheaton and Ray Telford—hustling to earn starting positions, it appeared certain holdovers would be working hard to retain regular spots. It should have been a happy combination.

Despite the 32 years admitted by Wilson and George Paul, the club has an average age of 25, which should be just about right. And O'Keefes are well trained. Grealy uses the Old Country method of "pressure training" and feels there is not a better-conditioned team in the Coast League.

Yet O'Keefes have only two victories and a tie to show for the first seven matches of their 18-game schedule. Much of the trouble appears to stem from a breakdown in the slick, short-passing patterns that last season produced some of the most enjoyable soccer ever seen in this town.

This is surprising in view of the obvious wealth of individual talent, but don't be too quick to blame the men with the ball. Soccer coaches have long been pleading "when not in possession get into position" because nobody has yet learned how to pas the ball through an opponent.

O'Keefes simply haven't been running into open spots often enough to receive passes. When they get back in the habit, the passing pattern could fall back into place.

How does Grealy feel about the changes in fortunes?

"Naturally I'm disappointed because I feel we have a better club than last season," says Frank, the data-processing expert at city hall during his working hours. "We have better football players.

"One thing we don't seem to have is the same club spirit as last year. Of course, a few wins make a difference. Last season we started off well (15 games without a loss) and this time we have lost games we thought we should have won.

"Also, you have to get the breaks. For two years our club never seemed to get the breaks and then in several close games last year, often when the other team was more dangerous, the breaks came our way. Now we seem to be back in the old pattern of two and three years ago.

"What has surprised me is that with so many good players on this club we have had trouble passing the ball. Even short passes are going astray. That is the important part of the game and one in which we did better last year.

"Last Saturday we had a very good discussion on it. The players realized the passing problem and I think the meeting has given us a better outlook and perhaps a fresh start. I know I have much more optimism than I had two weeks ago."

Some fans last season claimed Grealy shuffled his players too much and made too many substitutions. This was a foolish argument because the Grealy system was a winning sytem. His substitutions often had a touch of magic, like in the Kennedy Cup final at Vancouver when Joe Alexis was sent in at centre-forward and scored the winning goal against Mexico the first time he touched the ball.

How about this season?

"Everywhere the game has speeded up," Frank commented, "players must be able to move fast and move often. I still think substitution and change is a good thing, but it should not be overdone.

"Last year our subs were going in and scoring. So far this year my substitutions haven't been paying off.

"However, I feel it can be very useful having substitutes. A fresh player can give a team a lift. Some of our forwards haven't been able to go all out all the way. Often it's either a case of having them change positions or send in a substitute."

"I feel that lack of accurate passing and lack of mobility off the ball are the big problems. The players know what they have to do. They feel they can get back on their game and I am confident we're going to start winning."

That's the way it was in the coach's corner today as O'Keefes prepared for an exhibtion tussle with an all-star high school squad and it was interesting to note that after last Saturday's meeting, Grealy's men played a tremendous first half at Vancouver. Then they stopped running and finally settled for a 1-1 tie with New Westminster Royals.

This seemed to indicate that all O'Keefes need is a little more desire to act like cowboys and head for the wide open spaces. The team that keeps running has a habit of making its own breaks.

Pro Soccer Continues Work on Merger Plan

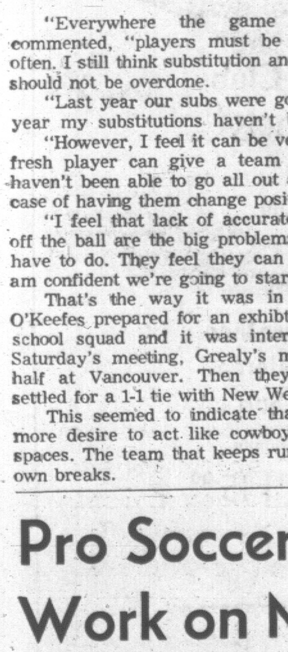
ST. LOUIS (AP)—President Robert Guelker of the U.S. Soccer Football Association says a meeting tonight between the two rival professional soccer leagues in the United States and Canada probably will not result in approval of a merger agreement.

Guelker said the meeting, between the National Professional Soccer League and the United Soccer Association, will be an exploratory one.

"I don't think we'll be able to come out and say they (the NPSL) have been sanctioned," he said. The USSFA is the United States representative to soccer's worldwide ruling organization. Only the United Soccer Association is recognized by the USSFA.

Guelker said he was not predicting the merger agreement between the two leagues would not be sanctioned eventually. He said any agreement reached at the meeting would have to go back to the merger committees of the two leagues.

The two leagues announced Thursday agreement had been reached on a merger. Negotiations had been going on for some time.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Blazing finish carried Fred Nelson to men's tenpin award in ninth week of fifth annual Bowler-of-the-Week competition. After opening with games of 190 and 203 in IAA League at Mayfair Lanes, Fred rattled pins for 249 tally to wind up with 642 total and top spot in male kegling division of Times-sponsored contest.

Marcetta Goals Slap Down Gulls

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gerry Leonard of Seattle Totems decided one game with an overtime goal and the Rochester Americans' power play decided the other in Western Hockey League play Friday.

Leonard's goal at 4:22 of the overtime gave the Totems a 3-2 victory over the Canucks before 4,057 fans at Vancouver. Three power play goals by the touring American League team spelled the difference in a 4-1 victory over San Diego Gulls in the California city.

The Canucks had overcome a 2-0 deficit on third-period goals by Mike Corbett and Phil Maloney, who tied the contest with 10 seconds remaining in regulation time. Earl Heiskala and Bill Dineen spotted the Totems the early lead.

Seattle goalie Don Head played a standout game, kicking out 31 shots. He turned back three breakaways by Vancouver players, including two by the veteran Maloney.

Alex Faulkner counted for the Gulls.

Legion Expanding Training Program

The Royal Canadian Legion will start off a stepped-up program to expand track and field in the province with its third annual coaching conference in Vancouver next month, a Legion spokesman has announced.

The conference, scheduled for Jan. 12 to 14 at the Rayal Towers Hotel, will adopt the theme of "Track and Field Development," Legion sports training chairman John Griffiths said.

The Legion is undertaking a program of expansion of facilities where experienced coaches can train athletes. They want to change the situation in which inadequate facilities keep athletes and coaches away from a competitive program.

Bradley Ready For Pro Debut

NEW YORK (AP)—Bill Bradley's long-awaited debut in the National Basketball Association will take place tonight when New York Knickerbockers meet Detroit Pistons at Madison Square Garden.

The former Princeton star, recently released from active duty with the air force, worked out for the first time with the Knicks Thursday and Coach Dick McGuire pronounced him in shape to play.

Soccer Falcons Sign Two Players

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Falcons of the National Professional Soccer League increased their winter roster to eight players this week by signing winger Oscar Lopez and wing half Bernard Vargas to two-year contracts.

Lopez was the team's second leading scorer this year and ranked sixth in the league with 31 points. Vargas had 10 points.

And 22-year-old Doug Favell provided the Flyers with solid netminding as he racked up his second shutout of the season in a 3-0 victory that vaulted Philadelphia back into first place by a point over the Kings.

Favell handled 24 shots flawlessly as 4,624 fans in the new Los Angeles rink at nearby Long Beach saw the Kings lose the league lead for the second time in a week.

Only veterans John Bower of Toronto Maple Leafs and Gump Worsley of Montreal Canadiens have two shutouts to their credit so far this season.

CREDIBLE SHOWINGS

While the other four teams in the expanded Western division seem to be floundering in their first NHL seasons, the Kings and the Flyers have one thing in common—farm clubs in the American League from which to draw reinforcements.

The Flyers purchased Quebec Aces at the start of the season and picked up a lot of Montreal talent while the Kings bought Eddie Shore's Springfield club.

Boh teams will be back in action Sunday, Los Angeles at Boston against the Bruins, leaders of the Eastern Division, and the Flyers at home against Chicago Black Hawks.

Tonight it will be Chicago at Montreal, Boston at Toronto, Pittsburgh Penguins at Minnesota North Stars, St. Louis Blues against the Seals in Oakland and New York Rangers against the Red Wings in Detroit.

Other Sunday games have Montreal in New York, Toronto at St. Louis and Pittsburgh entertaining Minnesota.

The Canadiens, with Worsley, Jean Beliveau and John Ferguson just back in action, reported another injury Friday. Yvon Cournoyer, their leading scorer, suffered a pulled groin muscle during practice Friday and is expected to miss both weekend games.

Broncs Toss Cats Into Shutout Tub

New Players Earn Praise From Manager

PENTICTON — Victoria Cougars were tossed into a whitewash bath by Penticton's classy Broncos Friday night but Victoria manager Bob Reid still found reason to smile.

Actually, two reasons.

The play of three newcomers to Victoria's B.C. Junior Hockey League lineup delighted Reid despite Penticton's 6-0 victory.

So did some of the spirit.

"It was the roughest game we have played this season," said Reid. "I thought the players stood up for their rights more so than in any game. They didn't back down."

Defencemen Stacey Whiting and John Margetts and centre John Van Horlick played their first game for Victoria. All gave Reid and coach Doug Anderson "signs that they could help us considerably."

MAJOR PENALTIES

Whiting played with team captain Bill Mainland and Margetts was paired with Bob Webb, who drew the nod as Victoria's outstanding performer.

Van Horlick was involved in one of the two fights that spiced the menu for abut 1,000 fans. Van Horlick and Penticton's Pat Laughton drew majors for a second-period set-to.

A more violent flareup came in the third period when Greg Gow of Victoria and Penticton's Len Barrie squared off. Barrie drew a minor and major and Gow was assessed a five-minute penalty and a game misconduct when he wound up scuffling with a linesman.

FORWARDS BELOW PAR

Cougars drew 11 of the game's 19 penalties, but skated off all but one of their short-handed situations. Dale McBain scored Penticton's fifth goal while Cougars' Garth Greig was sitting out a penalty.

Apart from Van Horlick and centre Larry Limacher, Cougar forwards were far below their best form. They played a disjointed game and seemed to disdain shooting on goal.

"Any offence we had," said Reid, "came from the defence."

GRAHAME WAS BUSY

Rookie Ron Grahame played strongly in goal for Victoria, turning away 48 shots. Rival Bob Belbin needed to block only 16 for his second shutout — and Penticton's third—of the season.

Saddest moment for the Cats came late in the first period. Trailing 1-0 and having just killed off a penalty, the Cougars were beaten for two goals in 11 seconds. It was Penticton's game after that.

Boston Winger Sent to Blazers

BOSTON (AP)—Boston Bruins have sent Ron Murphy to Oklahoma City of the Central Professional Hockey League.

Coach Harry Sinden of the National Hockey League club said that the veteran winger, who has been sidelined with a torn bicep tendon in his left arm, would stay with the Blazers for six games and return to the Boston lineup on Christmas night.

OAKLAND CROWDS 'NOT A PROBLEM'

NEW YORK (CP) — Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, denied Friday that Oakland Seals are in financial trouble.

He was commenting on rumors that were given impetus by some low attendance figures for Oakland home games.

"I don't consider them to be in a bad financial way and neither do the league governors," Campbell said following a meeting of the league owners here to review progress after one-third of the hockey season.

The president also denied there is any thought of moving the Oakland franchise to another city.

Oakland had only 2,426 fans at a game there this week. The club is one of the six new ones created by NHL expansion.

"I am pleased with the progress the Oakland club is making," said the league president, "and there is no thought about the Oakland team moving to another city.

"The league will give them and the other five new teams whatever support is necessary, financial or otherwise."

Detroit's Howe Enters Hospital

DETROIT (AP)—Gordie Howe, 39-year-old star of Detroit Red Wings, has entered a Detroit hospital complaining of back pains and stomach cramps.

The big right winger, possessor of virtually every scoring and longevity record in the National Hockey League, entered hospital Friday night.

X-rays were ordered today by Dr. John Finley, Red Wings team physician, who said Howe rested comfortably through the night.

GORDIE HOWE

Manager-coach Sid Abel of the Wings hasn't completely counted his superstar out of tonight's game in Detroit against New York Rangers, but he said he would await the results of the x-rays and other tests before scratching Howe from the lineup.

"Knowing Gordie, he must really have been hurting to go to the hospital like that," a Red Wings spokesman said.

Howe, who played in a 2-2 tie with Montreal Thursday, has 13 goals and 10 assists this year to rank among the top 10 NHL scorers.

While there was no indication what is ailing Howe, only Friday the U.S. communicable disease centre at Atlanta, Ga., disclosed that the first outbreaks of influenza for the 1967-68 epidemiologic year had occurred in Michigan.

Approximately 3,000 students were affected at Western Michigan University at Kalamazoo, and a similar illness was reported in Lansing public schools.

Stockers Move Up By Topping Tudors

Schwarok figured in all but one of the Stockers' goals, winding up with three goals and two assists in a five-point burst.

Linemate Nick Nicoletti also had a big hand in the show and picked up four points on a goal and three assists.

RIFLES EDGED

Victory moved Stockers out of a last-place tie with Queen's Own Rifles, who dropped a 6-5 decision to Nanaimo in Friday's other game.

Stockers now sit two points behind second-place Monarchs with two games in hand. These will be made up in a four-point game at Nanaimo.

Last week's interlocking game at the Sports Centre had to be halted with Nanaimo ahead, 4-1, when a storm knocked out arena lighting and league officials have decided to make the game at Nanaimo count as two games.

In the Nanaimo-Rifles game Friday, Stan Piper scored two of his three goals in the first period, giving the visitors a 3-0 lead with the opener by Cal Pederson.

Nanaimo was ahead 5-1, at the end of two periods of play.

Piper and Jim Robertson scored before the second period was half over but the Rifles came back with two rallies and just missed tying the game.

John Zeller put one in late in the second period and Dave Stones and Des Desjardins scored in the first minutes of the third to bring the soldiers within two points.

Jim peterson halted that rally with what proved to be the winning tally but the Rifles climbed within one goal with almost 10 minutes remaining on scoring shots by Zeller and Nick Brown. Their bid for a tie was blocked by Nanaimo goalie Ray Chenier, who made 11 of his 26 saves in the final period.

VICTORIA ENTRANT LEADS . . . . . . NOVICE LADIES' EVENT

Hosts Sparkle at Skate Meet

More than 140 skaters are taking part in the three-day championships.

Joan Hall and Allan Coomb of the host club finished first in the novice dance. They were followed by clubmates Dianne Kepkay and Tim Bacon, in second, and Cherie Clark and Robbie Dick.

Margaret McEwon won the pre-juvenile girls' event over 16 other entries. Second place went to Patricia Woods of North Shore Winter Club and third to Julie Udell of Vancouver's Hollyburn Club.

Bill Shepard of Delta Figure Skating Club broke the Capilano winning streak by taking the pre-juvenile boys' event. Geoff Groff of Kerrisdale and Kevin Busch of the Vancouver Figure Skating Club were second and third, respectively.

Barbara Ann Maple of Victoria took an early lead in the novice ladies' event. She had 45.1 points to lead second-place Brenda Bing of North Shore, who had 43.6.

IT'S MY VIEW . . .

By Ernie Fedoruk

About Scots and Shattered Myths . . .

For years, Wally Milligan has been trying to tell me something. "Ernie" always comes out sounding like "Airr-nie" when the University of Victoria soccer coach says it. George Paul, though he tried, was let out as the interpreter long ago.

Listening to them in a soccer dressing room has almost convinced me that one Scot has to sound like another.

But Bill Crow, away from Scotland only about 24 hours, shattered the myth Friday. Here is a Scot who can be understood when he speaks English. It may or may not be because his game is rugby, and I'll have to ask Milligan to write in his reason.

The 360 students at Glenalmond Trinity College, 13 miles out of Perth, understand W. A. M. Crow. The students understand him so well, they are able to stand up and take bows as one of the schoolboy powers in Scottish rugby.

Only about half of the school's total enrollment qualifies for the 16-to-18 age bracket that produced the 20 players for their visit to Vancouver Island.

Crow still is a comparative novice as a coach, but rapidly is gaining a reputation as a tactician. Once a reservist for Scotland's international team, he has been Glenalmond's rugby coach for only four years.

The Trinitinians won 13 of 16 matches last season and carried a 9-3, won-lost record before pausing, in mid-term, to make this visit to Canada.

* * *

They made their first favorable impression against University School, 26-0, on Thursday.

There was finesse in the Scots' backfield, to be sure. But most pleasing was their style of play. Despite the apparent one-sided score, one old salt on the sidelines Thursday regarded the match "as close to being a spectator's game as I've seen in a long time."

There is a tendency, among Canadian sides, to kick into touch much too often. To their credit, the University School side didn't overdo it. Still, they had to take a back seat to the tourists for the manner in which Glenalmond continually worked to retain possession of the ball and, at times, virtually disdained the kick into touch.

There are more games to come. The Scots play at Shawnigan Lake on Wednesday and then meet Greater Victoria's high school all-stars at Macdonald Park next Saturday. If they aren't pressed into a tactical change, the Glenalmond scholars might produce more of their crowd-pleasing dashes.

If there's any doubt, ask W. A. M. Crow. He's easy to understand.

A basketball game at Oak Bay High next Tuesday seems destined to join the Russia-Canada hockey match (Dec. 22) in the hear-and-read-but-can't-see category.

The hockey game is a sellout and Oak Bay's Gary Taylor feels the same fate is in store for the basketball bout. Extra bleachers are being installed for the game between Victoria-area schoolteachers and a Seattle team made up of disc-jockeys and some athletes (including footballer Steve Bramwell).

Taylor hopes to cram "about 1,200" into the gym. About 950 tickets already have been claimed.

The Seattle group, incidentally, annually receives about 90 requests for exhibition games. They are able to make only about 25 dates, and were delighted to take up Oak Bay on its suggestion to "break out of Washington State and visit Canada."

British Mares Bought By American Stables

Mrs. Marion duPont Scott of Montpelier Stud, Va., landed one of the biggest buys, bidding in Lord Carnarvon's mare, Ann Boleyn, for $41,580.

Ann Boleyn was sired by Tudor Minstrel and has been mated with Reko, the French triple classic winner.

Jeremy Tree's eight-year-old mare Heiress, sired by Rockefella, was purchased for Charles Engelhard of Far Hills, N.J. for $34,020.

Two more mares were purchased for Michael Ford of Omaha, Neb.,—for $18,900 and $30,240.

Ford said the two mares will be mated with Ford's 1966 Kentucky Derby winner Kauai King, now standing at Sagamore Farm in Maryland.

NORMAN RAAB

I Still Own the Eagles, Claims Harassed Jerry

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Jerry Wolman says he still owns Philadelphia Eagles and only bankruptcy could part him from the National Football League club.

Returning from an out-of-town trip Friday night, the 40-year-old builder-sportsman denied a published report that he had sold the Eagles for $14,500,000 to a Philadelphia clothing manufacturer.

He admitted, however, that he was negotiating to refinance the team in order to save his crumbling financial empire. He owns 52 per cent of the club and Earl Foreman, Washington attorney, holds 48 per cent.

Wolman has admitted he is in dire financial trouble caused by "poor planning and a tight money market."

NEVER SELL—WOLMAN

Wolman answered the report by issuing a statement which said he would never sell the club during his lifetime.

"The embarassment and abuse by the vultures who have crawled out of the woodwork to break me so they can have an opportunity to purchase the Philadelphia Eagles have made my fight much more difficult." Wolman said.

"I want it clearly understood that Norman Raab is a perfect gentleman and my reference above does not include Norman or his associates."

Wolman, admitted, however, he was talking with a number of people, including Raab, on the possibility of refinancing the Eagles.

APPROVAL REQUIRED

"There is a definite possibility that I will refinance the Eagles, but I can't say with whom."

Wolman said recently he had $95,000,000 in assets and $85,000,000 in liabilities.

League officials discounted the story the club had been sold, noting that under their constitution it is necessary for 13 of the 16 club owners to approve any change in ownership or stock of the franchise. A league spokesman said discussions between Wolman and Raab and other people, of which he was aware had not even reached the sounding out stage among clubs.

GRAPPLE CHAMPS DECIDED

Family's Snub Steered Ringo to Iron-Man Mark

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jim Ringo credits his wife, father and father-in-law for the new iron man record he'll set Sunday when he takes the field against the Dallas Cowboys.

Ringo, of Philadelphia Eagles, will start his 181st consecutive National Football League game, eclipsing the record he equalled last week by playing against Washington Redskins. He shared the mark with Dick Modzelewski, who started 180 games in a 14-year-career.

GOT TOLD OFF

The 35-year-old Ringo, said he recalls it as though it were yesterday. "I came home from Green Bay training camp in 1953, and told my family I got homesick and quit. I left camp without even telling the coaches."

The pain of the memory showed in Ringo's face as he allowed his mind to drift back 14 years. "My family rejected me," the stolid native of Easton, Pa., related.

"My wife told me, 'If you are going to quit, just don't sneak out of camp. Tell the coach. Do it like a man.' "

Ringo, one of pro football's all-time great offensive centres, then remembered his father's words on that day he admits was the turning point of his life.

"Once you start something son, never quit until you have completed it," Ringo quoted his dad.

"My father-in-law was funny about it. He said 'you mean you walked out on $5,250 for four months work?' "

Ringo never unpacked his bag. He looked at the disgusted looks on the faces of those he loved most and headed back for the Packers' camp in Grand Rapids, Wis.

There was one season when he contracted mononucleosis and spent Monday through Friday in the hopsital, practiced Saturday and played Sunday. Then back to the hospital.

He's had a dislocated shoulder, a bad back, pneumonia, a jammed neck, but each Sunday he was bent over, snapping the ball, applying the crushing blocks that made him all-NFL six times.

Biggest NFL game of the weekend was being staged in Los Angeles today as the Rams, who must win their last two games to grab the Coastal Division crown, tangled with the Green Bay Packers.

In Sunday's games, Detroit Lions are at New York, Cleveland Browns visit St. Louis, Chicago Bears host Minnesota Vikings, New Orleans is at Baltimore, San Francisco is at Atlanta and Pittsburgh Steelers play at Washington.

Dockers Inherit Third-Place Rung

They took over sole possession of third place by defeating winless Belmont Braves, 50-37, at Belmont behind a 16-point effort by Bob De Costa.

Rick Allen scored 17 points for the losers while Glen Kilduff added 13 points.

In another game, Mount Douglas Mountainmen moved into a fourth-place tie with idle Claremont by dumping University School, 59-43.

Late Penalty Goal Decides Boot Final

Oaklands waged a determined battle against the strong Tillicum side and held out until the closing stages of the tense struggle.

Then a penalty in the last minute of regulation time gave the Tillicum lads the opportunity they needed. Team captain Brad Clarke scored from the spot to nail down the title.

HABS LOSE TOP SCORER

MONTREAL (CP)—Jean Beliveau and John Ferguson returned to action Thursday night and Henri Richard is scheduled to get back into the club lineup here tonight but Montreal Canadiens still won't have a full-strength lineup for the game against Chicago Black Hawks.

On the injured list now is Yvan Cournoyer, their top scorer with 10 goals and 11 assists. He pulled a groin muscle at practice Friday and will miss at least both weekend games.

TRUE TEAM MAN . . .

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tackle Jim Parker of Baltimore has retired in order that his club can activate a healthy player to help them in their bid for a division championship in the National Football League.

"It's probably one of the most unselfish moves ever made in sports," coach Don Shula said of Parker's voluntary action taken because of an aching right knee.

Shula explained that only the 40 players on the roster in Sunday's game will be eligible for any playoff games.

Asked about giving up an opportunity to share in the lucrative spoils of another championship and playoff against the American Football League champions, the 275-pound Parker replied that "I never thought about it. Money is important but I would feel worse if it was thrown away on account of me."

A star at Ohio State University, where he was a linebacker, Parker was a first draft choice in 1957 and has been an all-star NFL selection both as a guard and a tackle.

FIGHT RESULTS

PORTLAND, Me. — Leo Difiore, 126, Portland, stopped Jose Garcia, 125, Worcester, Mass., 5.

Loch Ness Has Very Persuasive Monster

By ALFRED FRIENDLY
The Washington Post

INVERNESS, Scotland — It is difficult to believe in the existence of the Loch Ness monster. But it has now become even more difficult not to believe in it.

The evidence is extremely persuasive that here, in Scotland's largest lake, there are huge, fast-moving creatures unidentifiable with any other known species of animal.

But what they are, no one knows and may not know for some time to come. There are a dozen guesses, two or three of which are plausible and, in scientific terms, theoretically acceptable.

A good bit more about "Nessie" will probably be forthcoming in a few months when the semi-amateur — albeit technically professional — organization that has been keeping watch formally reports on this season's work.

It was its best year ever, with more sightings last summer than in the preceding five years together.

There were about 100 that it deems credible; 60 by tourists and 40 by its own staff. It made seven motion picture sequences which will be analyzed by the RAF's joint air reconnaissance intelligence centre before they are shown or the results discussed in detail.

That the Loch Ness phenomena, reported over some 1,500 years, are the consequences either of elaborate hoaxing or mass illusion seems to be out of the question.

The modern wave of sightings began in 1934 concurrently with the building of a new road along the northern shore. (The supposition is that the noise or vibrations of the blasting caused the animals to surface more frequently.) Views of the things have been reported ever since.

To assume hoaxing is to postulate a huge expenditure, improbably sophisticated equipment and a conspiracy so deft, extensive, prolonged and internally secure that only a paranoiac would credit it.

Similarly, the notion that reports of the monster were systematically developed as bait for tourists — James Thurber once wrote that Nessie "is reputed to have brought more income to Scotland than any other single attraction except scotch whiskey" — does not wash.

The expectable trappings of roadside stands and motels, souvenir-peddling and the like simply do not exist.

Very few of the thousands of residents — and the hundreds of men who have lived their lives on the lake as fishermen or boatmen — claim ever to have seen the animals, and only a handful claim to have seen them more than once.

The non-profit watching organization, bearing the awesome title of the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau dismisses out of hand nine out of 10 sightings claimed by tourists.

It automatically rejects every claim made within half an hour of the passage of a boat as being too likely to have been merely a bow wave. Its own staff averages 360 man-hours of watching to one sighting.

Moreover, the organization, functioning since 1962, operates with agreeable modesty. Except for an American professor of biochemistry at the University of Chicago, Dr. Roy Mackal, none of the staff or volunteer observers is a scientist. Each may have his own theory about the phenomena but he offers it only tentatively without claims of scientific proof.

The bureau was founded and for the most part has been financed by David James, a slight, jumpy former member of Parliament who spent a year as a cadet on a Finnish four-masted windjammer and two years as a surveyor in the Antarctic. In the British Navy Reserve in the war, he was captured and escaped from a German prison camp, making his way from Lubeck to Stockholm.

Incorrigibly adventurous but now a settled married man and the father of six, his only hope was to find an adventure to which he could commute. Loch Ness was the answer.

AND WOMEN

He Keeps Thinking About Rum

By JOHN MANNING

"Steady as she goes. We're bound for the South Seas."

"Aye skipper," grunts the helmsman.

He is a giant of a man with a shaven skull. To prevent the sun from blistering his cranium he rubs it daily with turtle oil.

Scuttlebutt has it that he once butted four Moors unconcious in a Casablanca street brawl. The dirk at his waist is exceptionally long and almost two inches broad at the haft: the man made it himself out of a whale harpoon.

He toys with the helm. It is an enormous mechanism, almost five feet across, yet its ten inch spokes appear no more than pencil-sized in the clench of his fist. Peeping through the black mass of his chest hair is a necklace of nineteen shark's teeth; one for every man he has killed in battle.

"Beggin' your pardon sorr," he says, "I hear there be women and rum in them there Marquesan Islands."

Eyes Glittered

The helmsman's eyes glitter. He licks his lips. "In three, four days sorrr, we'll be able to square off a'fore the trade and run with her. Ain't that so sorrr?"

"That's so Dragger. Keep your eyes on the compass."

"Aye skipper, they be glued to the card." Freeing one hand from the spokes of the helm he fondles his pate. "Each watch passes like treacles through a stout bottle, so slow I can hardly wait upon it. The women sorrr, I keep thinkin' of 'em. Flowers in their hair and all. And that dark Frenchy rum they flog out there, same as Martinique, one jug's enough to drive a priest wild."

"Stow the chatter!" I put a little snap into my voice. No sense in having a loose-lipped helmsman. The parrot on my shoulder repeats the order, "Stow the chatter!"

"Aye Skipper," and another "Aye" to the parrot.

Pirate Vessel

This ship is the ninety-two foot brigantine 'Devil's Choice,' the last full fledged pirate vessel still operating in the Pacific Ocean. She is fast this ship, faster than any Man-O-War; in a good fetch of wind she can spin off fourteen knots sooner than you can say 'Jack's your Uncle.'

We have just put out of Post Office Bay in the Galapagos Islands where we relieved a squat-hulled merchantman of her cargo. I picked it over myself; four bales of prime fur seal pelts, a chest of gold so heavy it took six men to lift it into my cabin, and a sultry Spanish wench, a passenger. She, too, is in my cabin.

There are eight deck cannons on this ship, two swivel guns and enough gunpowder to send Napoleon himself to Hell and back.

Rum Treat

In the last six months we have been operating out of the Galapagos Islands, basing 'Devil's Choice' in the lagoon at Barrington Island, hunting wild pigs and goats, refitting the ship, and occasionally, when the whim sparked us, pirating a trading ship. Once in that time we boarded a Boston whaler but found her holds emptier than a parson's wallet. I felt sorry for her crew, treated them to a keg of rum and sent them on their way. I feared her captain was not the best of navigators.

"I don't give a damn where the ship is," he confided over a glass, "as long as there are whales in sight!"

We left the Galapagos because the islands were coming too public. There were enough ships coming up from the Horn to make the waters off Barrington lagoon look busier than a Spithead naval revue. They had word of us I'm sure but we gave them the slip, leaving the fleet to windward, their shot falling astern of us like so many pebbles in a duck pond.

We nipped into Post Office Bay and paid our respects to the Spanish trader. He had no business taking furs out of North Pacific waters yet we parted on the best of terms, for I think he was glad to see the last of his fiery passenger. Besides his cargo I also borrowed two casks of his sherry. He seemed more upset about this than losing his company's gold.

Handpicked Crew

My crew of thirteen are all handpicked, a rum lot by ordinary standards but they can sail this ship 'till she stands on her beam ends and then some. Amongst them are four lascars, a former Bengall lancer, a remittance man, five Chinese junk sailors, and two Royal Navy officers purloined from a Mexican jail. A choice crew.

"Beggin' your pardon, sorr," says Dragger, the ex-Bengall Lancer, "how long d'you figure the crossing'll take?"

"Maybe three weeks."

He falls silent. I know what he is thinking. Two of the Chinese are holystoning the decks, the other three are aloft moving about the lacework of rigging with the calm, methodical sureness of professional seamen.

A lascar we call 'Scarface' is slipping canvas covers over the guns. With any luck a French pearl carrier will be the next to bid their black-eyed stare.

'I Fancy That . . .'

"The lads have a book up in the focs'le sorr," continues Dragger, "Written by that Melville bloke, the one whot chased the white whale all over hell's half acre and got hisself kilt in the process. The Mate read some aloud t'other night. It tells about them Marquesan women. They swum out to his ship they did, masses of 'em, nakid as the day they was born. I fancy that. Them islands be paradise for a sailor man . . ."

I turn away, annoyed by his chatter. It is time to see to the wants of my lithesome guest . . .

A nudge from the Mate snaps me out of my reverie and I see that Powindah has swung wildly off course. "A penny for your thoughts," says Patricia. I try to grin her offer away. Her eyebrows raise.

Like a determined society matron billowing light silk, Powindah is seeking her way out of Post Office Bay, tack on tack, her anchors lashed down, her halyards belayed and her parrot muttering "Keelhaul the swabs!" It is an auspicious beginning to a three thousand mile sail. For once, the present mirrors the world of dreams.

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife, Pat, are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor This is the 52nd in a series on their adventures.

Old Haunts Survive In Paris

"Paris wouldn't be Paris without its old brasseries," says Jacques Gauthier, 41, promoter of the new "Paris Committee for the Safeguard and Prestige of the Brasseries of the Good Old Times."

The word brasserie literally means brewery, but more commonly signifies a cafe or restaurant which specializes in light drinks and substantial food.

French brasseries bloomed around the turn of the century. They were consistently good, middle-priced havens. In times when the average French home was drab, if not musty, their glittering rocco splendor made them every man's castle.

The artists and intellectuals homed in to their polished wood warmth. A few among them even called such places "the brooding place of modern civilization."

But times change. Some of the most famous brasseries have gone tinsel modern, or sold out to shoe merchants.

The remaining score or more have seen their customers grow steadily old and grey while youth parades to "les drugstores" or "les pubs" for soft drinks and to play "les flippers"—pinball machines.

NORWAY'S VOSS MOUNTAIN

Four International Runs Beckon Canadian Skiers

MONTREAL — Did you know that "ski" is a Norwegian word? So is "slalom."

Norwegian skiing is the basis for all present-day ski techniques and the credit for establishing skiing as it is known today belongs to the Norwegians.

A popular, not-too-expensive sport, skiing is easy to master in a relatively short time.

But the more expert you are in any sport, the more you are able to enjoy it. So it is with skiing, too, and in February, 1968, many Canadians will have a chance to savor true skiing at its very best in Voss, Norway.

The departure from Montreal will be on February 29 and, after a brief stay in Copenhagen, and Oslo, skiing will start in Voss on Sunday, March 3.

TOUR LEADER

The tour leader will be the Norwegian Vice-Consul in Calgary, Amund Jonassen, an expert skier himself, who will head for the magnificent Voss Mountain country.

The nearby areas feature four runs all approved by Federation Internationale de Ski for international contests — one international downhill for men, one international downhill for ladies, an international giant slalom and a regular international slalom.

The FIS downhill run for men starts from near the top of 5,000-foot high Lonahorgi, and the other runs approved by the FIS start progressively lower on the same slope. All end practically in the village of Voss.

Just outside the National Park but still in the Banff region is Pigeon Mountain, catering particularly to family ski parties. Three Poma lifts, three runs for beginners, three intermediate and one expert. Day lodge, free nursery, ski patrol, ski shop and ski school.
Rental equipment is available in all of these areas, and you can rent skierized cars at Edmonton, Calgary, Banff and Jasper, with ski rack, snow tires, chains—the works. Our black-top highways are of the all-season type.

Four Years in Africa, McLeans Come Home

Rev. Walter McLean, 31, his wife Barbara and their two sons will settle here. Rev. McLean is the son of Very Rev. J. L. W. McLean, DD, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Douglas at Broughton.

As deputy director of the Centennial International Development Program the driving young minister was in Victoria in recent weeks as one of the sparkplugs for the March for Millions.

Over 10,000 marchers turned out for the Centennial youth project and an estimated $100,000 was pledged towards mobile classrooms for developing nations in the Commonwealth.

With the Centennial program closing, that job is finished now and Rev. McLean has brought his family home to Victoria. He has not decided what task he will set himself now.

Work with youth has been a speciality to date.

After a year's post-graduate work at Edinborough University, he served for a year as president of the Canadian Union of Students, a national organization of university undergraduates.

Then came the years in Nigeria where he worked for the Presbyterian Church and with volunteers of the Canadian University Services Overseas, men and women with a variety of skills helping emerging nations develop their economy.

HAVE YOU HEARD OF BAHA'U'LLAH?
A hundred years ago, a Prisoner in a Turkish fortress in the Holy Land announced a new Revelation of God. His name was Baha'u'llah. His "Letters to the Kings" are, without doubt, the most remarkable documents in religious history. Several million people have now responded to His call.
Local clergy of all faiths have just received an offer of Baha'u'llah's Message. We urge you to investigate it either through your clergyman, or by writing:

Needy Families to Reap Harvest of White Gifts

With the approach of the glad season, many churches will observe this Sunday as White Gift Sunday.

White-wrapped gifts brought to the sanctuary by members of church youth groups will be distributed among needy families at home and abroad.

"Give gladly to this Christmas festival," says Canon Grahame Baker, rector of St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra Street.

The white gifts presented at both services will be packed and sent to the Anglican diocese of the Cariboo in time for Christmas.

They will be distributed among Indian and non-Indian families by the priest in charge of the mission of St. Mary's, Lillooet.

High Standard Set By Departing Priest

A well-loved priest is leaving Victoria next week to take over the parish of Qualicum Beach and Parksville.

Rev. Jan Planeta has been priest in charge of the Sacred Heart parish at Lake Hill, Victoria, since 1956. Under his leadership the new school and convent on McKenzie Avenue were built.

The school was opened in September, 1958.

In November, 1964, construction began on the new Sacred Heart Church on Nelthorpe Street, just up the hill from the school. It was officially blessed and dedicated on June 26, 1966, and replaced the smaller church on Palmer Road.

"A modern rectory, built alongside the new church, completes the parish plant and this stands as a fitting monument to the able and dedicated leadership of Father Planeta," a church spokesman said.

Said a member of the parish: "Since Father Planeta came to us 12 years ago he has reached out a strong and steadfast hand and touched the lives of all his parishioners.

"With his cheerful serenity, he turned the growing years of Sacred Heart parish into golden years. He has set a high standard for all of us to work and live by."

Alcoholism Is Epidemic

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

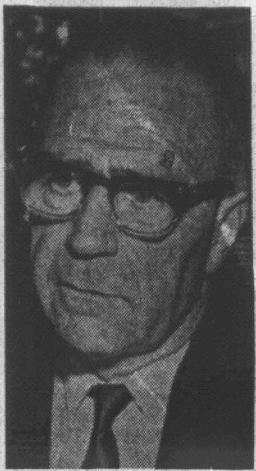
Every year more people are drinking more.

And every year a larger percentage of them are acquiring a "complex illness" which causes family distress and tragic child welfare problems.

"The misuse of alcohol has become the major addictive problem throughout British Columbia," John Gough, president of the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism, told the annual meeting in First United Church this week.

"Alcoholism is a disease running out of control," Mr. Gough said. "We are greatly concerned over the neglect and lack of understanding that surrounds the problem in this community."

Clergymen of various church denominations attended the meeting and supported Mr. Gough's plea that alcoholism is rapidly becoming a serious public health problem through British Columbia.



GOUGH

HALFWAY HOUSE

"There is need for in-patient facilities in our general hospitals," Mr. Gough said, "and for halfway houses. There is need, too, for counselling of the families of alcoholics."

Mr. Gough, formerly chairman of Greater Victoria School Board, spoke of the casual attitude that exists towards the misuse of alcoholic beverages.

"We need a public, multi-level education program that will change this attitude," he said.

"People who use alcohol as a beverage must learn to respect the fact that alcohol can be a lethal drug when taken by a person who is prone to alcoholism."

USE ALCOHOL

Mr. Gough said a great many secondary school students use alcohol as a social beverage several times a year.

"If this is to continue—and it seems almost impossible to stop it—then our young people must be presented with the facts about drinking.

"They must understand the scientific facts as to what happens when alcohol enters the human system. The burden of this teaching and training should fall ideally on parents, but they, too, need more information."

Mr. Gough said the Victoria picture is gloomy and disturbing.

FAR GLOOMIER

"But it would be far gloomier but for the splendid services performed by such agencies as the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C.; Alcoholics Anonymous; Alcohol Research and the education council of the B.C. department of social welfare; and the Salvation Army, which offers residential treatment at its Harbor Light Centre on Yates Street."

Mr. Gough said acute alcoholism is a medical problem requiring hospitalization, trained staff, therapy and facilities for the follow-up of discharged patients.

RIGHT COURSE

Rev. G. Leighton Streight, public relations officer for the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism, said:

"Mr. Gough's report was a challenge. It showed us the difficulties which lie ahead and set our sights on the right course."

CHURCH FUNDS AID WAR VICTIMS

TORONTO (CP) — An Anglican church official said Friday many donors are probably unaware that $10,000 in church funds was used this year to help war victims in North and South Vietnam.

Canon M. P. Wilkinson, secretary of the Anglican Primate's World Relief Fund, said there was still ignorance about the contribution although the church had publicized in fund appeals that it intended to aid North Vietnamese civilians.

The donation was part of an estimated $40,000 to $50,000 sent by the Anglican, Presbyterian and United churches in Canada through the World Council of Churches to Vietnam.

Rev. G. D. Johnston, former moderator of the Presbyterian Church and chairman of its interchurch relations, said he did not know the amount of money sent by his church.

DONATE TO SUFFERERS

"We're not interested as a church in the rightness or wrongness of the war, but in the fact that people are suffering."

A United Church spokesman said $8,700 has been stipulated so far this year for aid to North and South Vietnam. The church gave $10,000 in 1965 and $5,200 in 1966.

HAPPY COMPANY will be the Sunday morning topic of Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley in Fairfield United Church. Mrs. William Sedgley will sing The Star of Bethlehem and the choir will present the anthem O Holy Night.

Vancouver Planner Quits

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver's planning commission chairman resigned Thursday night after saying he did not support the city's freeway plans.

Dr. Peter Oberlander, who is also head of the University of British Columbia's School of Regional and community Planning, made the announcement before a crowd of more than 800 at the second public meeting on freeways in two weeks.

"The planning program has broken down," he said. "The public has lost confidence in city planning.

"Decisions are being made that will greatly affect the city without first determining what kind of city the people want."

MINISTER EXPLAINS REASONS FOR REGIONAL DISTRICTS

'Province Getting Ready for the 1970s'

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

Municipal government is undergoing a not-always quiet revolution in British Columbia and many persons are puzzled by the developing status of regional district boards.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell recently answered a number of Times questions about his new device for solving the problems of growing urbanization in a wilderness province.

Here's how it went:

Answer—In 1965 we brought it in because we were looking ahead at the machinery that would be necessary for the 1970s and we wanted to be ready.

It had to be limited in the early stages and we wanted people to get used to the concept as well as give our staff experience in the field. We don't expect too much change in the format as it currently exists as far as the department's role is concerned.

While there may be minor amendments in 1968 they will be only of a technical nature and the period between 1968 and 1970 will be occupied largely with consolidating the administrative details.

How many regional districts are there now and how many will there be ultimately?

As of now there are 24 with five more to go, which should be finished this year.

★ ★ ★

139 when all (regional districts) are completed.

What percentage of the province, in terms of geography and population, now is organized in regional districts and how does this compare with municipalities?

I would estimate regional districts cover 90 per cent, in terms of population, but the geography really is not too meaningful. The meaningful geography approaches 100 per cent when you couple it with population distribution. For comparison, less than five per cent of the area of B.C. has been organized (into municipalities) and yet 80 per cent of the population lives within municipal jurisdictions currently.

The answer is "No" and it is fundamental to the concept that it rests itself, and will continue to rest, on the existing local government level. It is a completely functional animal.

★ ★ ★

What benefits has it brought?

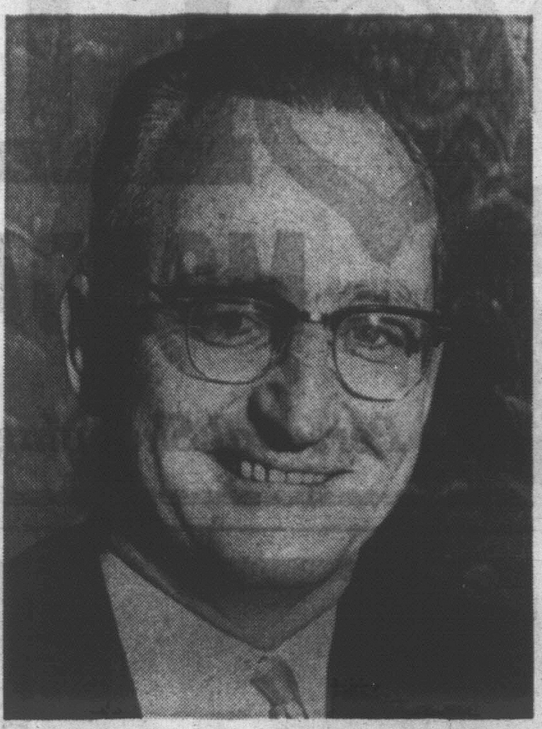
It has begun to break down the barriers of parochial attitudes. This is only the initial benefit but people are beginning to look towards a regional tool to solve problems beyond the capabilities of the individual municipalities.

It also has made specific and logical solutions become obvious to everyone, particularly in such things as hospital services.

It is the only possible way of transferring funds from the provincial to the municipal level for such things as regional park acquisition.



CAMPBELL . . . 'everyone will benefit'

And it has made the public think more in terms of regional planning. It has made the people realize the only way to reduce unit costs of services is by spreading them over a wider area.

★ ★ ★

What criticisms have you heard and have any of them modified your views or procedure?

The main criticism we've had revolved around whether or not people have enough information about regional districts. When or how that happy point is reached, I wouldn't know.

A second criticism — and this is lessening as the mechanism gets into gear and is almost non-existent here in the capital region district — is that regional boards will override municipal councils.

There's still the odd flare-up of this but it's becoming more obvious to all that it is the municipalities that decide what functions will take place and on what terms.

On the whole, we really have had very little criticism and most of that has been wrapped up in semantics — such expressions as "loss of community identity" and "backdoor amalgamation" etc.

The only basic modification we have made (as a result of criticism) was in the last session when we switched from the "opting out" to the "opting in" principle whereby municipalities would vote for joining with each other individually on a particular function or regional service.

The vehicle had to get on the road and we thought it was possible to create regional districts using the philosophy of opting out but we found with experience in the field that was not the way to do it.

You have to use the approach of opting in and, in effect, this is what led to the regional hospital district principle of opting in on an umbrella basis but using priorities.

Will municipal regional districts be extended to the whole province unilaterally as have regional hospital districts?

This is the anomaly that is not understood. Because we already had 13 (municipal) regional districts, it was just necessary to have companion orders (by cabinet) so that first those already viable were deemed to be also regional hospital districts.

In those places were there were no (municipal) regional districts, we created them but with no functions and then deemed these to be the hospital districts so that the whole thing is going to have common boundaries — except that we still have left one or two places for (special) definition.

There may be the possibility that one or two areas would be only regional hospital districts because they have no organized municipalities in existence within them — for example, the Stikine area is being considered this way.

Is the government deliberately fuzzing the distinction between the two types of districts by using similar names boundaries?

The answer is "No". The use of the same boundaries for the previously stated reason. We based them on school district groupings where convenient but only for geographical purposes. If we had started carving up the province from scratch, it would have taken years to define the districts with legal descriptions and we would never have got this off the ground as soon as we did.

These boundaries, by the way, are not immutable. Once you initiate boundaries, you have to adjust them to population shifts.

Will more types of regional jurisdictions be set up on the same boundary lines?

We do not wish to have single-purpose boards. The reverse is true. We would like multi-purpose boards. But the regional district board should be a policy-making body with help from citizens.

In all functions that become important to any regional district, we would hope the board will lean heavily on citizen advisory committees — for such things as planning, for instance.

While this is a statutory requirement in the case of hospitals, we would like to see this done voluntarily in all other fields. The regional board obviously cannot be the custodian of technical expertise in every function in which it becomes involved.

Common sense should dictate that it establish these advisory groups to help it.

What do you visualize as the "needs of the 1970s" which regional district boards should meet?

Well, they won't do these things simultaneously across the province because each area will reach its own level of needs and response.

But they all will have to meet the hospital needs now. That is there now.

I think all of them have problems of regional land use now and I also think all of them have problems of pollution, or will have soon. These two, land use and pollution, are not separable problems.

When you move away from these three things we have in common now, you get down to the specifics of two types of future needs — problems which vary from region to region and the varying aspirations of the regions.

I would call garbage disposal, transportation — and here I'm not talking about B.C. Hydro transit buses but transportation related to land use — water supply and distribution, and sewerage the problems that vary from region to region.

In the aspirations net — useful things in the social services area — I would place such things as housing, parks, recreation, family courts, libraries, museums and in some cases regional police or fire departments and perhaps convention centres.

But the underlying concept of the whole regional district program is that this is a federated system.

The constitution of this system is in fact the individual letters patent given to each separate regional district.

It is a highly pragmatic approach because each function within each district has, in effect, its own federated constitution — item by item and budget by budget.

I take the position that if you have 15 problems, the best way to solve them is to break them down into individual components and tackle them as they come.

The best way not to solve them is to start with 15 solutions at once.

They Offer Their Parish A Pyramid of Experience

By LILLIAN NEWBERY

TORONTO (CP) — A deckhand at 16, a ship commander in the Second World War, a transport department chief at 51, Capt. F. S. Slocombe might have been expected to begin thinking of retirement when he reached 64.

Instead he enrolled in divinity at the University of Toronto's Trinity College this fall. In two years he'll be ordained by the Anglican Church of Canada.

Born in Cardiff, Wales, Capt. Slocombe went to sea in 1919 and obtained his master's certificate by the age of 25. He came to Canada in 1930 and sailed the Great Lakes, spending six winters teaching nautical subjects in Owen Sound, Ont.

He joined the transport department as examiner of masters and mates in Toronto in 1937, served in the Second World War as commander of the Montcalm on the Halifax-Murmansk supply route, then returned to the transport department, rising to the position of chief of the nautical division in 1954.

Abandoning such a career for theology may seem unusual but every year three or four men do much the same thing at Trinity. When they graduate they offer their first parishes something their younger classmates lack—a pyramid of experience in living.

PART OF TREND

Canon Howard W. Buchner, dean of divinity, says the church doesn't actively recruit this type of student; he's part of a trend toward more than one career.

"In their technological educations they may have felt a lack of self-fulfilment and human relationships. . . . They're attracted to the ministry because they have been involved, committed Christians. Once the men are financially secure and their families are under way, they can give themselves to the ministry."

The dean is obviously delighted with the extra wallop these mature students pack.

"They've been through death, sickness, families, wealth and poverty. It fascinates me that students today did not live through the war. They don't even know its history.

"Take a man of Capt. Slocombe's age who has been through two world wars and a depression. It's a very broad base to build on."

John Lawson, 41, a corporation lawyer and Queen's Counsel, wasn't even a regular churchgoer until five years ago. Then he became people's warden at St. Thomas Church and entered the ministry as a challenge.

He hopes to combine law and theology in somewhat the same way as a lawyer who studies forensic medicine. But he admits he hasn't had time to discuss this concept with his professors because of the heavy work load of studies.

HARD ON WIVES

Dr. Buchner said heavy courses aren't the only problems these mature students face—some have to contend with wives who didn't marry a parson and may have trouble adjusting.

But Keith Adams, a former technical engineer with the Bell Telephone Co., says his decision to enter the ministry was something he and his wife took together.

"If there are problems with the wife, there must be some lack of communication within the marriage."

The son of a church organist, he considered the ministry as a youth "in the same way some boys want to be doctors or firemen." But he became an engineer with no idea of ever changing careers.

After his ordination in 1966, Mr. Adams went to a west-end Toronto parish with about 900 families.

Hanging on the wall of his study, his engineering certificate often proves a bridge to people who come in for counselling when they see he once held a layman's job.

"Now they're asking me to install the church public address system."

Advisory Council Plan Criticized On Secrecy Angle

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Allister Grosart lodged a protest Thursday against establishment of a Canada manpower and immigration advisory council that would report only in private to the government, not to Parliament and the public.

The Ontario Conservative told the Senate committee on labor and immigration it is vital that the public know what the new council thinks about government policy, particularly in the immigration field.

He spoke as the committee approved a bill setting up the advisory council. The bill has already passed the Commons.

Senator Grosart said of immigration policy: "There is no area of government more clouded in secrecy and deception."

Color TV Radiation Under Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. public health service said this week radiation danger found in some General Electric Co. color television sets may be an industry-wide problem.

The health service announced it has asked the Electronics Industries Association to co-operate in a nationwide program to check for possible excessive radiation from TV sets.

A survey in Pinellas County, Fla., revealed the possibility of an industry-wide problem, the health service said in a statement.

The problem with big-screen GE color sets was revealed last July. The health service said then 90 per cent of the 112,000 potentially dangerous receivers had been corrected, but 9,000 had not been located.

Dr. William H. Stewart, U.S. surgeon-general, said in Wednesday's statement the potential for biological damage is quite low.

Long exposure to radiation can cause damage to the sex organs, with such effects as sterility and genetic damage that could lead to birth defects.

'Israelis Failed On Refugees'

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The plight of Arab refugees in the Middle East is "even worse than we pessimists predicted last summer," Rev. A. C. Forrest, editor of the United Church Observer, said this week.

"Israel has failed to keep her promise of July 2 to permit east bank refugees to return to their empty camps and homes in occupied territory on the west bank" of the Jordan River, he said.

"Only 14,000 of the 170,000 who applied through the International Red Cross to go back have been allowed to return" since the end of the June war between Israel and the Arab nations, Dr. Forrest told an audience in Bridge Street United Church.

"The rest are huddled in United Nations emergency camps, caves, hovels, and in the crowded homes of relatives."

Dr. Forrest, who has visited the Middle East four times in 10 years, devoted one recent issue of The Observer to a personal report on the June war and its aftermath. His articles were critical of Israel's position particularly in respect to the Arab refugee question. He has been criticized by Jewish spokesmen for his writings.

Youths Jailed For Possession Of Marijuana

Two Americans were sentenced to nine months when they pleaded guilty Friday at Sidney to possession of marijuana.

In central court a youth received three months for a similar offence.

City police and RCMP officers combined forces at Sidney to arrest Robert Karl Rohrer, 20, of Tirtin, Calif., and Philip Munroe, 20, of Eureka, Calif.

The men were found with a small quantity of marijuana and ten and a half caps of LSD. A charge of importing a drug into Canada was dropped.

They pleaded guilty to the possession charge.

In the city Magistrate William Ostler told Gary Nieman, 131 Sims, that he could not understand "the obsession with the young to try it " (marijuana) when it should be obvious after repeated warnings, that the punishment for possession would be severe.

"The use of marijuana encourages suppliers. Without users there would be no traffickers," he said. "It has got to stop."

Nieman had been found at a party with other young people. He had one cigarette in his possession, said defence counsel Jack Gatehouse who pleaded that a sentence of one month would be just.

Arthur Mayse

The election promises have all been made, and a few hours from now, by the democratic process of marking Xs with a blunt pencil on the end of a string, we will have saddled an assortment of men and women with the task of tending our regional affairs.

The winners, rather than the losers, have my sympathy. Whether veterans in office or rookies still unscarred, they have taken on a very tough job.

Wish them luck, because they are going to need it!

It may be that our local governments have faced a rougher task, but this I'm inclined to doubt. Certainly in the 16 years I've inhabited these parts, the challenge to make inadequate finances meet swarming needs has never been grimmer.

What we found when we came here, lured by the remembered loveliness of a unique peninsula, was a small city from which extended municipalities whose growth-rate was among the slowest in Canada. Areas now urban in character were still semi-rural, and the deep country was only a hop-skip distant.

That was Greater Victoria comparatively few years ago. Had anyone then predicted the influx of population which was to begin with the early 1950s and continue unabated, I very much doubt we'd have believed him.

So much for days gone by. On any front you care to mention, the candidates who today win election face a drastically altered picture.

Our hospitals are in trouble from which only a concentrated and costly effort can rescue them. The Times report on that subject Wednesday underlined their need for relief from drastic overcrowding.

Sewage disposal, a major headache for years now, is going to cost this area a minimum of $23.5 million, and approximately twice that sum if we refuse—as we should—to settle for a system by which sewage will be dumped into our surrounding waters.

Schools? We are taking children into our classrooms at the rate of 1,000 beginning students each September. One little school that began with about 90 kids in 1951 has spread in all directions to accommodate close to 300, and will need more rooms all too soon.

This is part of the load today's successful candidates inherit. I haven't a pig's idea how they're going to deal with it, and admire their courage in taking it on.

To the difficulties confronting them, you may add the neglect of a provincial government which seems determined that the municipalities shall struggle along with precious little help.

This isn't the way it should be; and certainly, in the matter of hospital aid, Mr. Bennett's government has been worse than laggard. We need, and should have, at least one more general hospital. As for when we'll get it, your guess is as good as mine.

What all this adds up to is a state of affairs which I confidently expect to grow worse before it begins to get better. As a voter, I don't envy those who must struggle toward solutions.

If you have ever observed through a council meeting, you will realize that even at the best of times, public office is no picnic. It's a grind, and I'm not sure that such rewards as go with election success compensate for the wear and tear.

I am not out to make heroes of those whom we taxpayers choose to represent us. Unless the world has turned upside down with a vengeance, their number will not be entirely free of chumps and do-nothings.

But they deserve a good-luck wish, before they go to the firing line.

Perhaps that will help compensate for numerous later occasions when we who elected them exercise another democratic right. They had better expect to be criticized freely and plentifully.

Election victors, I salute you . . . and now, will you please get off the dime and do something about everything?

UNITED FAMILY on welfare fares less well than family broken up in foster homes under British Columbia rules, but these six of Margaret's eight youngsters prefer to stick together. ## Mosaic On Verge Of Folding

Greater Victoria's new inter-high school newspaper, Mosaic, with one issue behind it is on the verge of folding.

About 7,500 copies of the four-page sheet were distributed free when the first edition was published Nov. 17. But a lack of advertisers put the paper about $135 in the hole from the outset.

NO ADVERTISERS

The next edition, scheduled to appear Jan. 12, will be printed but that may be the last because student staff has not been able to line up any new advertisers.

The 18-year-old arts student at the University of Victoria said canvassers "have been everywhere but most of the time we don't get past the secretary."

Grants from the B.C. Assembly of Students will support two editions but that could be the end.

The first edition, which includes stories by reporters from district high schools and dealt with a survey of student views on an English course, was well-received by students, said Mr. Van Veen.

GOOD STAFF

As for the next edition, "we have good staff and material, just no money."

Plans called for Mosaic to be published six times a year with stories of interest to high school students, their parents and the teaching staff.

Straight Talk Urged Over Hospital Crisis

'Let's Have Facts' Says Board Official

By PETE LOUDON

A call for some straight talk from civic, medical and hospital officials to allay public concern over the current patient bed shortage was issued today by a member of the Regional Board.

"We are told we have a bed shortage crisis. But nothing immediate is being done in the way of temporary facilities, as far as I know," said Geoff Mitchell, Metchosin representative on the district super-council.

"This suggests the crisis may not really be a crisis," he said in an interview.

750 CASES

"We are told there are 750 urgent cases waiting hospital admission and 2,000 on the non-urgent waiting list.

"If urgent means urgent, is it good enough to tell the public to sit back and wait for a report of a survey of the situation which may appear in January?

"It is suggested it will take five years to build new hospitals. Can we wait that long? Isn't there something we can do now?"

He said words like urgent, crisis and emergency are often debased.

"An emergency isn't something you cure in five years."

On the other hand 750 urgent cases are an emergency, in his opinion. He thought hospital, medical and civic officials should assess the problem for the public.

"If it's an emergency, let's act like it is."

DOES IT QUALIFY?

Mr. Mitchell said the community has civil defence field hospitals ready for emergency. He asked whether the present situation qualifies.

Could, or should, hospital beds be put in sun rooms, should private rooms be made into doubles or small wards?

Has the hospital organization considered moving student nurses from residence into private quarters to permit these residences on hospital grounds to be converted as auxiliary treatment areas?

If there is a staff shortage, should nurses who have left the profession be called back to service and ward aides recruited from the community?

CHANGE SCHEDULE

He wondered whether operating room schedules couldn't be extended over weekends and evenings.

"It may be that these things are not necessary and that the public has been misled. This should be made clear."

Mr. Mitchell said it is "small comfort" to people waiting for treatment to be told to wait until the survey is reported to learn the answers.

He noted that a city physician stated this week that four persons on the "urgent list" died while waiting admission.

No one else in the medical-hospital fraternity has since commented on this and the public is entitled to know whether such a situation is liable to be repeated, he said.

The phrase "No comment—wait for the survey report" is inadequate and unfair under the circumstances, Mr. Mitchell stated.

WITHHELD COMMENT

(Until recently Victoria Medical Society provided weekly reports on the bed shortage to local newspapers. But last week a VMS official withheld any comment on the bed situation because of a possible controversy.

(Dr. C. H. Hemming, chairman of the Victoria and District Hospitals' Advisory Council also urged patience until the completion of the current hospital survey being undertaken for municipal and provincial governments by the Toronto firm of Agnew-Peckham.)

100 STARS TO LIGHT SKY TO MARK CENTURY II START

A 100 star-shell firework will be set off New Year's Eve to mark the end of the Centennial Year and to mark the start of Century II.

B.C. Centennial committee chairman L. J. Wallace will light the firework and Coun. A. R. Mebs, chairman of the Victoria committee, will release 100 helium-filled balloons.

During the celebrations a time capsule carrying records and mementos of the two Centennial years will be implanted in the stonework at Confederation Court near the Legislative Buildings.

WHEN YOU'RE SIX you can smile even with a sore throat and confined to bed. You can accept poverty because you don't know riches. If you don't have toys you cut up newspapers. Patsy also needs extensive dental care and warm clothing. Welfare pays for her doctor and her medicine and someone will bring a Christmas basket. But after Christmas what? In a fatherless family of nine occasional charity doesn't guarantee a secure, hopeful future.

Our Dynamic Welfare System: A Lesson in Hard Living

By PETE LOUDON

Premier Bennett should take an afternoon off and visit my new friends in Victoria West.

It certainly isn't doing much for 46-year-old Margaret, a widow, and her eight children, Sandra 19, Jack 15, Donald 13, Cindy 10, Richard 7, Patsy 6, Valerie 3, and Tina Marie 2.

The way our dynamic welfare system works, they are living on $32 per person, per month—if you can call that living.

Of course, if Margaret was to desert them, or if Margaret was to die—an idea she tries not to consider—the welfare system would spend a great deal more to help the family.

$32 Each

Right now they get $250 from welfare and $40 in family allowances from Ottawa. Divide $290 by nine—$32 each. Yet if the kids were in foster homes there would be $50 a month for those aged under six, $60 for those six to 12, $70 for those 12 to 14, and $75 for those 14 to 21.

No one could take in kids for less and give them the essentials. But their mother is expected to.

She could throw up her hands and say, "I can't look after them. Take them." But welfare authorities won't do that while there's any hope she can struggle along.

She couldn't do that anyway. She loves them. So she pays the penalty for trying to keep the family as a unit.

I'll personally drive Mr. Bennett or the mayor or anyone else who doubts this story, to see Margaret and her eight children.

This is what they'll see:

The glass is gone from the latchless front door and replaced by a sheet of plywood. The door opens on a drab empty hall brightened only by the big eyes of children, some of them in bare feet on a cold carpetless floor.

The rooms opening off the sides of the hall are necessarily bedrooms, three boys share one, four girls another. Margaret will appear carrying Tina, wrapped in a blanket. Patsy spends her days in bed because of a throat infection. One of the beds has no mattress. None have quilts or bedspreads.

Jack, the 15-year-old, will perhaps be giving Patsy her medicine "like the doctor said." Jack has dropped out of school but he has no job.

No Smile

Sandra, who is 19, stays home and helps too. Girls who can't afford to dress as well as others their age and who are painfully aware of a need for a dentist's help, usually stay home. She's a pretty girl otherwise but there's no smile in her eyes.

One of the youngsters will be feeding green millwood to the crumbling brick fireplace in the living room. There's neither grate nor firescreen, but then the stuff burns like a wet mattress. It hardly heats the patternless linoleum.

Recently, when the wood ran out and the kitchen oil stove failed simultaneously, they fed some of the kitchen chairs into the fireplace to keep the little ones warm.

Margaret and her oldest keep the house as neat as they can. But the paint needs redoing so badly everything looks drab. The lights won't be on because the bill must be kept down. There's no TV, of course. But one of the boys built a radio out of parts of several others.

Window Broken

The big window in the kitchen is broken and covered with cardboard.

The bathroom needs plaster but radiant against the wall is the family's pride and joy—a sparkling new toilet. The old one misbehaved so Margaret, on her own, went out and bought a toilet and tank and she and Jack installed it.

But they didn't seal the outlet and flooded the bathroom. Trying to fix it they broke the bowl. They had to get another and a plumber and they're trying to pay off the $110 bill at $10 a month.

The premier would be glad to know they are a pay-as-you-go family, aside from the toilet payment. A social worker gives them regular vouchers for groceries, fuel, water and lights.

The voucher for this week's groceries totalled $34.11—for nine people, all according to regulations, recommendations and stipulations laid down by the provincial welfare department.

For clothes and almost everything else they depend on the $40 federal government family allowance cheque—and charity.

No one really expects the premier to visit Margaret and her kids. A boost in her welfare allowances is unlikely. After all they eat and sleep and her medical expenses are being paid and she just got a Merry Christmas $10 bonus from welfare authorities. Divide that by nine and see what it comes to.

But any reader who has spare linens, blankets, furniture, pots, food, clothing, can help her by donating them to St. Vincent De Paul Stores. Just say it's for Margaret.

Temporary

The St. Vincent's people will sort the donations and give her what she needs and some other family may benefit from duplicate gifts if the city is generous.

The thing to remember is that this is a temporary type of help to one family out of many in similar straits here and elsewhere in B.C.

The only way anyone can help Margaret and her family on a permanent basis—and others in the same boat—is by convincing the government that $32 per person is too little aid for a widow and eight children.

How do you go about that? You tell me.

Ask The Times

Q. How does one get music or lyrics considered for publication? J. C.

A. By submitting them to a music publisher. The reference department of the Victoria Public Library has a directory of American publishers and lists of Canadian publishers can be found in the city directories, also in the library.

Q. Are Red Chinese troops fighting with the Viet Cong in Vietnam? A. S.

A. There have been no reports that Red China has sent troops to Vietnam.

FOUR PEDESTRIANS TREATED IN HOSPITAL

Rash of Injuries Ends Safety Week

Four pedestrians have been treated in hospital in the last 24 hours after being knocked down by cars on Victoria streets.

Three are still in hospital.

Mrs. Jessie Smith, 86, of 1515 Belcher, is in Royal Jubilee Hospital with undetermined injuries. She was hit at Oak Bay and Morrison at 9:30 a.m. today.

Police have not released the name of the driver involved.

William Webster, 19, of 1190 May St., is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with a broken knee and head injuries.

He was hit by a car at Cook and Oliphant at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Police say the car was driven by Geoffry Holyhead, 3401 Cook.

Nine-year-old Stewart Kirkley, 1408 Stadacona, was treated for leg injuries after he was hit as he crossed Begbie St. at 6:50 Friday night.

Police say he was struck by a car eastbound on Begbie driven by James Cowie, 1740 Garnet.

A fourth pedestrian, Margaret Pratt, 18, of Suite 7, 750 Pemberton, is in satisfactory condition in St. Joseph's Hospital with cuts and bruises.

Police report she was hit as she crossed Fort near Pemberton by a car driven west on Fort by Alfred Broome, 865 St. Patrick.

Four pedestrians have died on Victoria streets in the past two and one-half weeks, and harried city traffic police are continuing efforts to halt the carnage.

Women

Women's Editor Pat Dufour

Newlyweds to Live in Courtenay After Vows in Local Cathedral

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a taffeta gown styled with a scalloped neckline and angel sleeves, with the skirt sweeping back en train. A flowered headpiece held her tiered illusion veil. As a jewelry accent she wore a gold watch, gift of the groom.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Albert LaRoche, Ste. 310, 1021 Cook Street; Mr. Richard Scully, Stellarton, N.S., and the late Mrs. Scully. Fr. Patrick Quigley officiated.

Mrs. Marie Novak was matron of honor for her sister, wearing a gown of rose peau de sole with toning headpiece. Miss Cathy Thompson was bridesmaid wearing a similar gown in teal blue with matching headpiece. Both had gold pendants with pearls, gifts of the bride, as jewelry accents. They carried bouquets of white carnations.

At the reception following in the Dominion Hall a three-tier wedding cake centred the head table. It was cut with a silver and pearl knife used by the bride's grandparents on their wedding day. B. Horsman proposed the toast to the bride.

Travelling to Victoria for the service were Mr. and Mrs. W. Dodsworth, Mr. and Mrs. M. Lawson, all of Duncan; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cousins of Cowichan Station; Mrs. Marie Novak and Theresa, the bride's sister and niece, of Edmonton, Alta.

HOLIDAY MOTIF

OES Bazaar Realizes $400 To Help Cancer Projects

Gaily colored Christmas centrepieces decorated the tea room of the K of P Hall when the Centennial Chapter No. 87, Order of the Eastern Star, held its bazaar last Saturday.

Mrs. D. Marshall was the general convener, assisted by worthy grand matron, Mrs. M. Royston, who officially opened the bazaar. Miss Joan Stancombe, worthy matron, greeted the guests.

Conveners at the various stalls were: Home baking, Mrs. I. Mosses; sewing, Mrs. H. Fediw; $1 and under, Mrs. E. Keown; candy, Mrs. J. Kettles and Mrs. M. Brown; white elephants, Mrs. M. Ellis; penny raffle, Mrs. A. Maertons-Poole; cards, Mrs. E. Stancombe; Christmas stall, Mrs. R. Owens.

Bingo games were arranged by W. Pace. Mrs. M. Whiteside, Mrs. M. Buckingham, Mrs. M. Price, Mrs. M. Perkin, and Mrs. E. Stancombe were in charge of the contests.

As you well know, it's a glittery season fashionwise . . . and you can go all out and glitter elegantly from top to toe if you feel so inclined . . . but what we want to touch upon today is the subtle look of just a touch of glitter on wool suits and dresses which we saw beautifully exemplified in a wide selection of wool dresses and suits at Miss Frith's . . . Naturally this subtle glitter look is intended for afternoon wear . . . carrying through for cocktails and dinner . . . and we personally consider it very, very elegant! . . . Rhinestones combined with wool may sound a bit of a paradox . . . but not so; on the contrary, it's great! . . . All the ease and comfort of wool with the sparkle that spells festiveness! . . . Many of these suits and dresses can easily have their glitter trim removed later on if you tire of it . . . Lurex, as well as rhinestones, is used with discretion in many of Miss Frith's lovely clothes . . . You'll find a lot of white . . . the In color for winter wear . . . as well as pastels . . . Some of the styles are tailored, with frosted edging, and come in larger sizes . . . so if you're not too slim, don't think festive glitters aren't for you! . . . Moreover, there's a wide price range so no matter what your clothes budget may be, you'll find a smart, subdued glitter style to suit it . . . and you . . . at . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Have you ever seen a Dresden china chandelier? . . . Well, neither had we, until we saw the magnificent specimen in Sydney Reynolds' window the other day . . . As a matter of fact, it's the first such chandelier Reynolds' have ever had . . . obtained along with the rest of their choice new Dresden shipment after much negotiation with the original Dresden factory in Germany . . . We don't think anything better exemplifies true 18th century elegance than Dresden china . . . every last bit modelled and painted by hand . . . by dedicated craftsmen . . . Besides their unique and splendid chandelier, Reynolds have beautiful Dresden table centres . . . footed with cherubs . . . lavish with raised flowers and other exquisite ornamentation for which Dresden is famous . . . There are dainty pierced bowls for fruit . . . compotes . . . flower bowls . . . Truly delightful dressing table mirrors . . . not to mention a number of the traditional Dresden figurines . . . and something new in the shape of a table cigarette holder on three levels . . . Also new at Reynolds . . . the most beautiful white and gold Meissen coffee set . . . consisting of tray, pot, sugar and creamer, six cups and saucers and six tea plates . . . Wunderbar! . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-3931.

An over-all appearance of being well groomed is greatly helped by having a well-organized, attractive area where you can attend to the personal niceties of being a 'girl-girl.'

IN STEP WITH STYLE

By Nona Damaske

Girl-Girl Grooming

Damaske

Recently at a small dinner party, a male guest referred to a woman, whom I know has passed her 50th birthday, as a real girl-girl. I could tell by the tone of his voice and the look of admiration on his face that this was a compliment and I asked him just what he meant.

He said it was rather hard to explain as it was not just one special thing but a combination of many things. Being a girl-girl has nothing to do with age . . . it is a matter of being feminine, looking fresh, smelling sweet, having a ready smile and an easy air of well-being.

For the average busy woman this can be a bit of a problem. Some days, there just isn't enough time to go through the leisurely step-by-step routine that beauty experts recommend.

You just cannot skip the daily bath or shower, makeup must be applied with care and that takes time . . . if you have a bright, well-organized work area you can certainly save some time. Bathroom, bedroom or dressing room . . . whichever is the most convenient, stick to one spot. Wandering from room to room wastes valuable time. Just be sure all your grooming aids are within arm's reach.

A good light is of prime importance . . . if you need more light consider the makeup mirror encircled by bright bulbs. This mirror, a small version of the makeup mirrors found in movie star's dressing rooms, is now available in Victoria.

Santa Claus has arrived in Victoria and you might consider asking him for any of these very attractive, Canadian-made makeup area accessories.

Bathroom Boutiques by Dafri of Toronto are fashioned in simulated antique gold, they are exquisitely feminine, and they are inexpensive.

A mirrored tray on four delicate feet has four cherubs sitting around the edge. These adorable golden cherubs are found on each article of the matching sets.

PEEKING CHERUB

The drinking glass (remember mouth wash is as important as your deodorant) has a circle of pearls between two chain-like cords of gold . . . a cherub peeks over the edge and one nestles at the bottom of the glass. A tiny ash-tray also has a circle of pearls and a watching cherub. The golden soap dish is shaped like a shell.

There are lipstick holders for two, four or five lipstick tubes. There are also perfume spray holders, tissue containers and hair spray container cover-ups.

If you are a man who wants his loved one to be a real girl-girl put several of these attractive grooming aids in her Christmas stocking.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Do-It-Yourself Toy Gives Hours of Fun

By Penny Saver

When most children's toys are so automated that they play by themselves without any help from the child, I enjoy seeing one that demands some thought and initiative. I have seen a child whose favorite toy is a set of plastic blocks that he fits together into piles identified as "nice trucks." He is as happy playing with these as with the 10-times-more-realistic trucks that someone else has made.

I was pleased to see a game that inspires this initiative in a child old enough to use hammer and nails. Packed in a wooden carpenter's box, this game consists of pieces of soft wood, hammer, nails, pliers, screwdriver, paint brush and bottles of a special non-toxic paint. The child can put these pieces of wood together to make boats or trucks or buildings. Hardwood wheels for the trucks and plastic windows and cardboard panels for the houses are included. The pliers and screwdriver are to remove the nails so that the child can start again. Manufactured completely in Victoria, this game retails at $8.95.

I was attracted the other day by piggy banks that look like pigs. These sophisticated items are made of paper mache or ceramic and are a great substitute for the old tobacco tin that I used to hold my spare change. Obviously part of the hippie movement, these pigs are covered in flowers. They cost $1.75 each. Other banks of similar style are made in the shape of water buffalo, lions, rhinoceroses and many other animals. The price on these items can go as high as $6.75. They make charming gifts.

If you sometimes feel lonely or know someone who does, why not get one of the ceramic mobiles I found the other day. These hang from a hook and are shaped like dogs, cats, people and other animals. They ring faintly when moved. The company guarantees that they will love people. If one should prove hostile, just return it to the factory and it will be severely chastized. These instant companions sell for $9.95 each.

If you would like to know where I shopped, please call me at 382-3131.

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

Two women members of the New Democratic Party in Saskatchewan seem determined to prove that the old adage "Two can live as cheaply as one" is a workable—not whimsical—format. If they have their way, each little starry-eyed bride who says "I do" will automatically be put on the payroll of the federal government, to the tune of approximately $100 a month. There's one snag . . . she'll have to settle for stoking the home fires, leaving hubby to set the business world aflame.

Speaking at a recent convention, the two women NDP members argued that "The home is the most important institution in the nation. If the wife is expected to bring up her children to be decent citizens, then she should be paid for it." They also pointed out that "the cost of living is so high that many women must work to supplement husbands' incomes."

They advocated that the NDP party adopt into its policy that home-makers be paid to stay in the home. Their method of financing would raise more than a few objections.

One said, "Funds would come from such stupid plans as the Canada Pension Plan and unemployment insurance."

It seems to me that there are other stumbling blocks that make this policy one that should be chewed on at great length.

To qualify for a family allowance cheque is simple enough. All one has to do is beget children and raise them to the age of 16. To qualify as a satisfactory home-maker may be a different matter.

Like any job, there are bound to be terms that must be met. What happens if you're the type of gal who finds cooking a roast as terrifying as being burned at the stake? Will you find yourself being put on probation until such time as you measure up to the rating of Satisfactory Housewife?

Hubby Could End Up as Foreman

Will adoring hubby suddenly become a menacing foreman, ready to report to the management that they made less than the perfect deal when they took his associate on staff?

Most jobs are clearly defined but that of home-maker provides lots of loopholes to ensnare the innocent. Looking back, I've run the risk of being demoted to home-maker, lowest grade, many a time.

One such instance was the Christmas that I decided to curry favor with the "boss" by making our Christmas puddings. At that time, we had a coal and wood stove, to me a formidable monster, the like of which I'd previously seen only in picture books.

The operation took hours, complicated by my inexperience and apparent inability to keep the rapacious appetite of that iron monster fed. Eventually the deed was done. The puddings, capped in cloths and steaming away in a huge boiler, filled the kitchen with tempting odors . . . and steam.

I looked at the table, piled high with dishes, and knew then that I should throw away my home-maker's union card. I'd forgotten to add the suet!

Even the "foreman" was unable to come up with a suitable solution. The nearest he came was when he suggested adding the missing ingredient with the aid of a pea-shooter!

We ended up going through the whole operation the next evening and eating "units" off the first "assembly line" before they went mouldy. By the time we finished mopping up the second evening, the sounds we were both muttering were anything but carols! Had I been on the payroll of the federal government at that time, I'm sure I'd have been "docked" for wastage.

Then, too, the implied condition that your children must grow up to be "decent citizens" would make a mother timorous in this era of causes, "flower children" and "pot" parties. Imagine watching Junior toddling his first steps and wondering if you'll be asked to refund all your pay if he ends up with an addiction for long hair, guitar music and unwashed clothing.

The Saskatchewan NDP conference ended by having the motion tabled, to be studied by the party executive at their leisure.

Which is just as well. If this policy ever became law career girls would rarely have a chance to change their status. We'd all be too busy working in order to finance other people's home-life.

SEW SIMPLE

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Will you please tell me how to make armholes deeper? Everything I make is too tight and pulls at the armhole making it most uncomfortable.

Mrs. F.C.

Dear Mrs. F.C.:

I am wondering if you have been clipping the seam allowance clear to the stitching line to release the pull of the seam. If you have already done this, try this next remedy. Stitch the facing on in the usual manner, clip and try on.

If it appears too tight, restitch the armhole seam, tapering from nothing just above the notch in front, and gradually stitching deeper in front and at the underarm. A ¼-inch deeper seam makes the armhole considerably larger, so enlarge very cautiously. Try not to finish with a large gaping armhole.

Amy Vanderbilt to Take Plunge for Fourth Time

ETIQUETTE QUEEN BREAKS RULE

NEW YORK (AP)—Since Amy Vanderbilt makes the rules, she can break them—or change them, which she intends to do before taking her fourth trip to the altar soon to wed Curtis Kellar, a lawyer.

"Soon" depends upon how much time it takes her to discover closet space for a husband in her 10-room house on Manhattan's East Side—"probably at the end of February," she says.

Whenever the ceremony takes place, all eight children by the couple's previous marriages will be present.

Any devotee of the Amy Vanderbilt New Complete Book of Etiquette, just revised, might assume this to be a breach of etiquette. It says on page 99:

"It is poor taste for children of a first marriage to even attend the marriage of either parent the second time."

Now she knows how wrong she was.

"I was thinking of those dreadful Hollywood marriages where the children switch parents almost from day to day when I wrote that," explained the very proper 59-year-old arbiter of the proper thing to do. "My boys raised hell at the idea of being left out."

With an interval of 14 years between her third and this, her fourth, marriage, Amy's three sons are nearly grown. Though Kellar was divorced last year, Amy concluded it would be unfair to have her offspring on hand without the bridegroom's five youngsters.

ALTERS TRADITION

As a descendant of the first American Vanderbilt, Jan Aestsen van der Bilt, Amy feels genteely qualified to alter another wedding tradition—the reception.

The Vanderbilt-Kellar reception for 125 guests will be held at least two months before the wedding, on Dec. 30, in her soundproof living room. There, before the fireplace, in the receiving line will be the couple as well as his children; Lucia, Curtis, William, Betsy and Martha Kellar: and her children; stepson—John Vanderbilt Knopf, Patrick Paul Vanderbilt Jr., and Lincoln Gill Clark.

"I think the reception before is a wonderful idea for people like us," says Amy. The later wedding ceremony itself will be small and private. It will take a while, the bride-to-be figures, to build a workshop in the basement, convert a bedroom into a study, and create more wardrobe room for Kellar.

If there was a place for it in her etiquette book, Amy would offer some advice to divorcees. She thinks they should "forget about getting married again, see a psychiatrist and get rid of your hostilities.

"My psychiatrist tells me I'm a completely changed person. I was already a happy person when I met Curtis. I didn't need him to make me happy."

NEW LOOK AT ROYAL PALACE

DEAR ABBY . . .

Some Teen-agers Like to 'Talk Big'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am so upset I hardly know how to start this letter. While straightening up my teen-aged daughter's room, I came across a letter from a friend of hers in another city. I read it, partly out of curiosity, and partly to determine if it was something which could be discarded.

I was horrified at the filthy language, and also at the girl's delight in having found a theatre which shows only dirty movies!

This letter also described family possessions and "vacations," but Abby, I know the girl's parents and correspond with them, and this girl was writing lies.

What should I do? Now I suspect my daughter must be responding to these letters in equally filthy language, and since this girl is my daughter's best friend, I must assume that my daughter's tastes run toward dirty movies, too.

Don't these kids know that filling their minds and mouths with garbage will do them no good?

Should I write to this girl's mother and tell her to talk with her daughter? Should I talk with my daughter and tell her what I've learned? Or by age 15, are we too late to shape our children's morals?

A FAILURE.

DEAR "FAILURE": If you have done your best to shape your daughter's morals, you need not consider yourself a "failure." Some teen-agers feel "big" and grown-up using gutter language, exaggerating and even lying a little for effect, but that doesn't mean they are "no good." If they have been properly brought up (and even the best-reared children have gone through this stage) they will outgrow it.

At the appropriate time, subtly warn your daughter that mucking around in the lower registers of speech and entertainment can be habit-forming. In the meantime, keep the avenues of communication open between you and your daughter, and don't shake her confidence in you by letting her know that you were snooping. You were, you know.

DEAR ABBY: This isn't my problem, it's my sorority sister's. She really is a swell kid, and she's not dumb or anything like that, but she doesn't come over very strong. She's not bad looking, but this poor kid can't seem to get any dates on her own. We've fixed her up with several real sharp guys, but they never ask her out again because she's so quiet. They all say it's like pulling teeth to get a word out of her. Any suggestions?

A. E. PHI.

DEAR A. E. PHI: Yes. Get her a date with a dental student.

Confidential to Exhausted Mother in Portland: Perhaps the reason your baby is spoiled is because you can't spank two grandmothers.

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a frew minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion-beautifying cold water, smooth on tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive, but your drug store should be able to get you a supply.

SMART GALLERY

A trickster takes a dozen coins from his pocket and arranges them in the form of a square, with four coins on each side, as depicted above. He then challenges onlookers to change the position of four of these coins so that each of the four sides of the figure will contain five coins rather than four.

ANSWER: Place coin number 12 on coin number 1, coin number 3 on coin number four, six on seven, nine on ten.

SCIENCE FICTION?

True or false? If you don't know, guess.

1. The Leyden Jar, an invention of French jellymakers, is named for a town in France.

2. The garter snake's litter often consists of 20 or more offspring.

Answers: 1. False. It was a form of electrical condenser, named for the Netherlands' town of Leyden. 2. True.

HOW OLD IS YOUNG JIM?

Jim is 1-6 as old as his father, whose name is also Jim. His father's age, when divided by 2, 3, 4, 6 and 8 always leaves one remaining year. However, when Jim Sr.'s age is divided by 5 there is nothing left over. How old are Jim and his dad?

ANSWER: Jim's father is 25. Jim, Jr., four years and two months.

MINI-TEST

See if you can identify these statements as true or false:

1. The vanilla bean is closely related to the orchid. 2. The Mexican jumping bean has a moth inside. 3. The lima bean is named for Lima, Peru.

WEIGHTY MATTER TO SOLVE

One of the few things a penny still buys is a calculation of one's weight on a penny scale. This poser is about a person whose penny weight purchase was more than she bargained for.

While out walking with her baby and the family dog, a mother passed a penny scale and sought to weigh herself. However, she could not put down the baby and when she stepped on the scale with the child in her arms, the dog got on also. So the dial indicated 165 pounds.

When she told her husband of the incident, he said he could tell how much she weighed. To tease her, he told it in this way: "Seeing that the dog weighs one-fifth of the baby's weight and one-twenty-seventy of your weight, and that if the baby had weighed 10 per cent less and the dog 10 per cent more, and if you had not lost five pounds on account of your diet, then the combined weight of all three of you would have been 168 pounds."

CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST

So near and yet so far — Black is one step away from the king's row, yet never gets a king. White side moving up the board, to move first and win in six moves is the challenge. See if you can meet it.

Solution: White 12-8, Black 3-12, White 26-23, Black 19-26, White 28-19, Black 16-23, White 22-31-24, Black 20-27, White 11-16, Black 12-19, White 15-24-31.

HOW CAN CLUB BREAK EVEN?

The Grup Club is planning to hold a holiday luncheon at a local hotel. The hotel charges $20 for the exclusive use of a dining room, plus $2.50 per person. If the club charges its members $3 each and has four non-paying guests (the speakers), how many persons, including the four guests, must attend the luncheon so the club may come out even?

Solution: Sixty-four. The club must pay $20 plus $10 plus the number of members times $3.00. So the number of members times $0.50 would equal 30. The number of members would be 60 and in addition there would be the four guests present.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

If Capt. Bligh could have forseen that he would be honored by a special set of stamps by the descendents of the mutineers of the Bounty on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of his death, he would have doubtless been very much surprised.

Nevertheless Pitcairn Island released a set of three commemoratives on Dec. 7 for this very event, values being 1c, 8c, and 20c.

The 8c shows the overloaded 23 ft. pinnace crammed with the loyal members of the crew, starting off on their record-breaking voyage, which was to end three months later on the island of Timor, distant some 3,618 miles from their starting point.

While en route the boat passed through the Figian troup, so Fiji is also marking the occasion philatelically with three pictorials (4d, 1sh, and 2sh 6d).

Papua — New Guinea recently issued a special short-term set of four stamps featuring parrots of the territory. They comprise a 5c (Fairy Lory); 7c (Vulturine Parrot); 20c (Dusk Orange Lory); and 25c (Edward's Fig Parrot). They will be withdrawn from sale in Fabruary.

Because of a shortage of stamps for postal purposes, four of the old British Guiana definitive series have been overprinted locally in Guyana with the legend "Guyana Independence 1966". Values are 2, 3, 4, and 5c. These local reprints will not be supplied through the Crown Agents.

•

The independent territories, once under British jurisdiction in East and Central Africa, as well as Botswana, Lesotho, and Swaziland, have not devalued their currencies in accord with sterling, but have retained the previous rate to keep it in line with the South African Rand.

PUT WORDS BACK TOGETHER

Anagrams of five 8-letter words are given below. All have the same last three letters. Once you have found what those last three letters are, you should have little difficulty identifying the remaining words: 1. Ruin meat. 2. Heat site. 3. Aint dice. 4. Date time. 5. Tame pelt.

Answers: 1. Ruminate. 2. Hesitate. 3. Indicate. 4. Meditate. 5. Template.

9 IN MEMORIAM

AUSTIN—In loving memory of our beloved mother and grandmother, Lilian Austin, who passed away December 9, 1966.

Softly the leaves of memory fall,
Gently we gather and treasure them all;
Unseen, unheard, she is always near,
Still loved, still missed and very dear
—Ever remembered by Dorothy, Bill and children.

AUSTIN—In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Lilian Austin, who passed away Dec. 9, 1966.

The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.
—Ever remembered by her husband George and son Philip.

BOLTON—In loving memory of my son, David Trevor Bolton, who fell asleep Dec. 8, 1961.

Loving memories never die as years pass on and days go by . . .
Unseen, unheard, he is always near,
Still loved, still missed, and very dear.
—Sadly missed by his mother, Edith Chappell.

CAWSEY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Gordon, who passed away December 10, 1966.

His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.

To clasp his hand in the Better Land
Never to part again.

COOK — In loving memory of our son and brother, Robert Charles Cook who passed away Dec. 10, 1958.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

One way to be a really successful fisherman is to learn to think like a fish. The way to be a really successful defensive player is to learn to think like the declarer.

South didn't like to keep rebidding his five-card heart suit, but the game was rubber bridge and he had 100 honors. Furthermore, once he got started he never got a real chance to quit.

Opening lead: ♣ 9

He won the club lead with his jack and decided his best play would be to take the spade finesse, so he led a spade and finessed dummy's queen at trick two. Then he discarded a diamond and ruffed a spade with his ten of trumps.

West overruffed and played ace and eight of diamonds. East was in with the queen and noted that South had dropped the nine on that second diamond lead.

This was an automatic correct false-card. West could hold the seven of diamonds. He couldn't hold the nine because he would have led it.

It was up to East to make the correct play at his point. If West held the missing diamond, East's only hope would be to lead his last spade and hope that it would produce a trump trick for his partner.

As you can see, the diamond play sets the contract. The spade lead allows South to ruff, draw trumps and get rid of his last diamond on a spade.

How did East figure out that the diamond play was correct? He though like the declarer. It was rather apparent that South started with nine red cards. If six were hearts and headed by ace-king, South would simply have played ace-king of trumps once the spade finesse worked and then would have taken a discard of one of his three diamonds. Thus it became apparent that South was trying to handle four little diamonds and had started with only five trumps.

"I'm Looking For Someone

"Yes, I need a nice retired couple to look after me, I just can't handle the family that have me now. It's not because I need a touch up here and there but only because they need more room. I am real different and have a lot to offer other than my 2 bedrooms, living room and quaint kitchen. You are going to find this hard to believe but my yard is 65x190 on waterfront, with a boat dock. I've watched my people catch trout here and barbecue at the water's edge, can also say that we have a commanding view over the waterway. You will find me within the 3-mile circle, close to schools, bus and on sewer. The way I look at it I am worth a lot more than $11,450, but I should tell you that I heard my owners say that they need quite a bit of cash. If you phone the Real Estate Man I'll be happy to open my doors to you." 388-4271 anytime.

SECRECY SCREEN

Soviets Charge 4 With Terrorism

By ANTHONY COLLINGS

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has brought four young intellectuals to trial on charges of being part of an armed terrorist network trying to undermine or overthrow the Communist state, informed sources said today.

An information blackout made independent confirmation of the report impossible, but the sources said the case was regarded as so serious that the Soviet Communist party's ruling Central Committee met secretly to discuss its implications.

Wih the arrest of the four in Leningrad, the scene of the trial, secret police discovered caches of arms that included machine-guns and grenades, the sources said. A Soviet military officer is suspected of having supplied the weapons, one source said.

The Leningrad group was linked with similar secret groups in the region of the Soviet Ukraine and in the big industrial city of Sverdlovsk in the Ural Mountains, the sources said.

Terrorism against the state carries a possible death penalty in the Soviet Union, but according to the sources' account, the Central Committee apparently decided to recommend the severest penalty short of execution—life imprisonment in a maximum security prison. Two of the defendants are reported to have confessed and the other two have not.

The sources said the trial grew out of the arrest by the secret police last March of 25 intellectuals, professors and students connected with Leningrad University's philosophy department.

Transplant Rejection Hint Disappears

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Tiny indications that Louis Washkansky's body might be rejecting the transplanted heart he received a week ago disappeared following slightly intensified treatment, one of the team of doctors attending him said today.

The signs were the first suggestions that the greatest threat to be heart transplant—the tendency of the body to reject foreign tissue placed in it—might have begun

They were so small that they were not more than a "suspicion" of rejection and first appeared Friday said Dr. T. O'Donnovan.

Special tests conducted today following a slight stepping up in the treatment to counter "immunological rejection" showed they had disappeared.

Earlier, Dr. Barnard said that Washkansky could survive a slight rejection.

Drugs are being used to lessen the body's tendency to reject, but there is a limit to which these can be used because they lower the body's natural resistance to disease.

Dr. Donovan said that clinically Washkansky is in excellent condition.

Police said the parked car which was struck was shoved forward and hit a third vehicle.

WEEK'S WORK

Sawdust or gravel make good temporary paths within the garden. By their use in winter, a plan for permanent paths can evolve.

Pull earth up around kale, winter cabbage and sprouts. Make firm again after winds.

If any cane fruits have long ends whipping in wind, tie in, or shorten to lessen root loosening.

Store wood ashes from fireplace or bonfire in metal containers to use in spring around onions, leeks, pinks, carnations. Keep it dry over winter.

If you are giving as a Christmas gift a plant you have raised yourself, see that it is well groomed in every way, with a name label attached.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. A camellia planted in fall 1966 bloomed in spring '67, but although it grew well all summer and looks healthy, no flower buds have formed this year. Can you tell me why?—A. T., Oak Bay.

A. Your plant has been occupied with making new roots in new soil, and has not put energy into flower formation this year. If you care for it next summer with mulch and watering, you should have blooms again in 1969.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

Forget Plant, Sometimes It Pays

By JACK BEASTALL

Canada's Centennial Year has left us with many memories and a quantity of ailing plants, both indoors and out.

During the past summer entire families went places to see things and many a trip lasted longer than planned. While the folks thoroughly enjoyed themselves, the plants at home were suffering.

Jack

A substantial group of the home gardeners concerned were not experienced in preparing plants for a long period of neglect, and coupled with our unusual summer the results have been disastrous in varying degrees.

There are a few green thumbers who get more satisfaction from rejuvenating a sick plant than from tending one in good health, and this minority of indoor gardeners will probably have a picnic and some successes.

TRY EVERYTHING

The rest of us will try everything recommended by well meaning friends and fight a losing battle as long as there is one sickly leaf remaining.

Much time and effort would be saved if we decided right now whether the plants are worth any attempt to save them.

The answer will depend on the kind of plant concerned, but when we become honest with ourselves we have to admit that quite a few plants are kept only for sentimental reasons.

It is truly amazing the number of plants to which we give house room that no longer resemble their true selves. Grown out of character, dingy of foliage, and often devoid of the blooms for which they were originally valued, they would serve their greatest purpose on the compost heap making new soil.

DISCARD IT

Once a house plant suffers from neglect, the best course in my opinion is to discard it and start again, for seldom can the effects be overcome.

It is different with an outdoor plant which can often be nursed back to something worth having, but under the artificial conditions of indoor culture the results are rarely worth the trouble.

A common mistake is to apply fertilizer in the belief it will produce new leaves, flowers, and a new lease on life.

Fertilizer is rich food, not a medicine, and no living thing that is sick can handle rich food. The sickness has to be cured first.

The sickness suffered by a neglected plant is loss of hair roots through which food is imbibed, and hardening of cells due to insufficient moisture.

CUBS GROWTH

Cells of living tissue soon reach the point of no return, and while in the case of a plant this may not cause death, it does preclude any further growth, and without growth an indoor plant has lost its attraction and usefulness.

Regarding house plants and extended vacations, my line of reasoning is this: to keep plants in good condition requires light, air, and moisture, each in the right amount. To improvise a storage place where each type of plant will obtain optimum requirements is practically impossible. Therefore losses are inevitable.

Why not take these losses in the first place, disposing of the plants before going on the vacation?

With no plants to be stored, there is no preparation of a storage space, no indecision regarding amount of water that will be needed, no light bulbs left burning in basement or bathroom, in short no worries.

PUT ASIDE $25

Before leaving on the trip, set aside 25 dollars out of the thousand or so the trip will cost, and enjoy the fun of purchasing young and vigorous plants when you return. They will give more pleasure then plants that have suffered neglect.

For those who are struggling to reconstitute plants that were neglected last summer there is little consolation in this idea, but it may help in the future when an extended vacation is contemplated.

The Right Window Can Save You Money

The Andersen Corporation, a leading manufacturer of windows, notes that windows should provide ventilation, insulation and good visibility; offer low maintenance and ease of operation, and enhance a house's good looks.

The right windows can also save you money on fuel bills. Tests show, for example, that wood insulates many times better than aluminium and steel. Heating and air conditioning engineers recognize that even glass set in wood sash insulates better than glass in a metal sash. This means the right windows not only cut fuel costs, but keep the house warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

WELDED GLASS

The addition of welded insulating glass and factory-applied weatherstripping increases the insulating quality of windows and, as a convenience bonus, eliminates the bother of installing storm sash. Another option is grey-light tinted glass, which reduces the sun's glare.

Window experts also point to an increased need for good ventilating windows now that home air conditioning and non-operating wide-view windows — commonly called picture windows—have become popular. For maximum health and comfort, there should always be some windows that allow the free flow of fresh air. They suggest the use of awning, hopper and casement windows—such as Andersen casement units which open at a 90-degree angle—in combination with fixed units.

ANY NOOK OR CRANNY CAN HOLD HANDY DESK

By PAULINE GRAVES

Many a nook and cranny could be put to good use if only a homeowner had the eyes to see the possibilities.

Space between doors and windows, or corners too small for a furniture grouping can accommodate built-ins, shelves or cabinets, or be enhanced with a picture arrangement.

★

It is close enough to the kitchen, where there just was not enough room for a desk, to be handy, and small enough to be out of the traffic pattern between the family room and the outdoors.

Yet there is enough desk and shelf area to be usable.

Built almost like an open box, the unit hangs on the wall, leaving free space underneath for knees and for the chair to be tucked away without any interference from desk legs.

★

Lack of legs also makes it seem lighter. Because it is painted the color of the walls, the unit blends inconspicuously into the background.

The desk top, a scant 20''x36'', is ample enough for a telephone, lamp and pencil holder, with room left for writing.

Eight inches deep, the shelves hold recipe and reference books. And two shallow drawers store the telephone directory and stationery supplies.

★

White laminated plastic provides a smooth writing surface. Although the shelves are of 1''x8''s, a facing of ½''x1½'' flat molding across the shelves and down the sides gives a nice, finishing touch.

Check, Then Buy

Everyone talks about style, but few people who discuss it in relationship to furniture really know the fine points that differentiate one group from another—how to tell Queen Anne from Georgian, or Regency from Louis Quinze, for instance.

Many women have instinctive judgment—a good eye for line, an appreciation of scale—but unless they have knowledge to back up their instinct, they can never really be sure if they have chosen the best available in their ultimate purchase.

So in shopping for furniture, it is important to have guide lines, and it's basic good sense for any family or individual planning a furniture purchase—big or small—to check a reference book first.

Then, having found the style which best suits their personal taste and conforms to their needs, they are well armed with pointers when they begin their actual search on floors of furniture and department stores.

Fortunately for the careful shopper, it is possible to find, on the retail level, pieces which reproduce with fidelity and a regard for good craftsmanship the fine points of furniture of earlier periods.

HOVERCRAFT BIDS

Rivals Attack Money Picture

THE LAST of the 1967 lectures of the University Extension Association of Victoria will be delivered Monday evening at 8:15 by Dr. Hugh L. Keenleyside, co-chairman of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority in Room 168, Elliott Building, University of Victoria. His subject will be "Canadian Prime Ministers." The meeting is open to the public.

Rival applicants for a licence to serve Victoria, Nanaimo and Vancouver passenger traffic by Hovercraft ended their submissions Friday to the air committee of Canadian Transport Commission.

The bids are by Pacific Hovercraft Ltd., and Inter-Air Travel Ltd., and were the last cases heard in a week of hearings at Victoria Law Courts.

Each side assaulted the financial responsibility of the other in summations to the committee.

Counsel Jack Edwards, for Pacific, said there had been no evidence given by Inter-Air to show that financial arrangements were adequate. The matter was vague, he said, resulting in "no commitment by a firm of which nothing is known."

Pacific, on the other hand, had named persons who were backing that company.

Julian Kristiuk, appearing for Inter-Air, called the financial aspects of Pacific "a dream built upon a fantasy."

Pacific proposes to operate a service between Vancouver airport and some spot on the eastern shore of Greater Victoria, naming Oak Bay Marina and Cordova Bay as possibilities.

Inter-Air is interested in running downtown-to-downtown service, including Vancouver airport.

Both wish to run trips between Nanaimo and Vancouver as well.

Earlier, applications were made by a variety of companies for fixed-wing float plane service between Vancouver Island and the mainland, including Victoria harbor and Vancouver harbor.

Norman Gold, president of Airwest Airlines Ltd., one of the applicants, corrected an earlier report saying his company's bid was for triangle service between Victoria, Nanaimo and Vancouver.

He said the firm wants to make direct Victoria-Vancouver and Nanaimo-Vancouver flights by float plane.

The committee will make recommendations to the transport commission, which will announce its findings early next year.

$15 Million For Schools 'Not Enough'

The B.C. government has covered about one-quarter of the combined backlog and potential borrowing needs for school construction this year, a B.C. School Trustees Association spokesman indicated Friday.

The cabinet Thursday authorized borrowing next week of $15 million from government pension funds for school construction.

But a BCSTA official in Vancouver this morning told the Times that this will have to be spread over an $11 million backlog and whatever is approved in Saturday's civic votes of 32 referenda totalling $48.3 million.

The backlog involves debentures approved last year by ratepayers but still not sold because education department approval has not been issued as required.

The total was calculated on the basis of 65 replies to a BCSTA circular enquiry to all 87 school districts to determine the value of stalled projects.

NO GUARANTEE

Premier Bennett on Nov. 23 issued a warning that although the government would allow school boards to put the $48.3 million-worth of bylaws on the ballots, there was no guarantee it would permit the actual borrowing of funds even if ratepayers approved them.

This week he added the stipulation that in some cases the government will not allow the money to be borrowed unless the ratepayers put it up themselves through a wartime-type Victory Loan bonds offering no more than 6⅞ per cent interest.

The $15 million issue will be taken up entirely by pension funds controlled by the B.C. cabinet and will not involve borrowing on the open money market

The money will be parcelled out among the school districts in the province entirely on the basis of the education department's designation of "essential" classroom construction

Greater Victoria has about $2.5 million worth of school building projects in the backlog awaiting departmental approval and this figure is expected to grow by $2 million before Christmas

Boat Going Too Fast

Fined $15 for operating a pleasure boat at more than five miles an hour was Rosina M. Lane, 429 Lampson.

The charge, heard in central court Thursday, was laid after a collision between two boats on Prospect Lake Aug. 27. Damage to both boats totalled $1,000.

B.C. to Pay Legal Costs Of Adoption

The provincial government will pick up the tab for legal work in processing future adoptions through the courts, Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell announced Friday night.

The social welfare department's new policy, effective Feb. 1, will mean a saving ranging from $50 to $125, depending on what the adopting parents' lawyer would have charged for handling the formalizing of the adoption through the courts.

"The only cost for adopting parents who have received their child through a social agency or who are adopting a relative will be the $20 court fee," Mr. Campbell told an audience of about 250 at the McPherson Playhouse.

He was moderator of a panel discussion on adoption, the first event in a unique three-day conference to probe the adoption process in B.C.

MANY SUGGESTIONS

"Those adopting parents who wish to retain a lawyer for the purpose are entirely free to do so at their own expense," said the minister. "If they wish the service provided by the department, they should discuss their intent with their social worker."

Mr. Campbell said the announcement was the result of many excellent suggestions by adopting parents in submissions to his office over recent months.

Prior to the conference he had invited adoptive parents to send along their ideas and suggestions on B.C.'s adoption program. Over 1,000 have done so.

'Warfare' Predicted Between Labor, Firms

VANCOUVER (CP) — War will erupt between labor and management over taxation and tight money policies of the federal government, Syd Thompson, president of Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America, said this week.

"We are in for a period of warfare between ourselves and those who are running the economy of this country to get a fair share of the wealth being produced here," he told Vancouver labor council.

"It seems fantastic to me to live in a country with the wealth we have—and B.C. is about the richest corner in the world—and face the policies deliberately set up to curtail the purchasing power of the working people, to make it impossible for the newly-married to own a home.

"The time is almost here now when the ordinary citizens will never be able to buy a home. These government policies have deep implications, not only for the immediate future but for years to come.

"The labor movement is going to have to be the force to reverse these policies, being devised by the government in cahoots with the big business interests."

The council passed resolutions criticizing the federal government for ignoring the principles of the Carter taxation report by "taxing the lower-paid workers."

City Engineer Sees Pollution Control Hope

City Engineer James Garnett is optimistic that the B.C. Pollution Board will be able to cope effectively with air, water and soil pollution.

"The fact that the provincial government this year enacted the Pollution Control Act to regulate pollution of land and water, is evidence of their concern," he told the annual convention of Association of Professional Engineers of B.C. Friday.

He said he was pleased that the government did not set up specific regulation by arbitrary standards, but required consideration of individual cases and regulation by performances.

This showed an appreciation of the need to retain flexibility in an area of rapidly changing technology, he said.

WISDOM NEEDED

"I hope it stays that way," he stated, "and I hope the pollution board will be able to differentiate with rare wisdom between wasteful and unnecessary treatment (where some pollution is acceptable) and selfish economy (in cases where no pollution is warranted)."

Pollution, he noted, was a serious problem in eastern and southern United Staes.

"I hope the horrible examples in the east and south, that have emphasized pollution, will never now be possible in B.C.," he said.

The answer to the problem of pollution was to plan today to control it, he said.

Tolls Urged For Urban Freeways

Tolls on urban express highways or freeways were advocated by a Vancouver engineer Friday.

N. D. Lee told the annual convention of Association of Professional Engineers of B.C. at the Empress Hotel that tolls would solve the problem of congestion on express highways, especially in Vancouver.

When questioned later on whether he would advocate tolls on a proposed freeway between Swartz Bay and Victoria, he said he would.

"It would all depend on whether it would be practical to collect tolls on such a freeway without bottling up traffic," he said. "I haven't studied conditions here, but it certainly would be practical in Vancouver." He explained that once an express highway is built, it is used by most motorists because it was so much better than other thoroughfares.

Slow drivers or motorists who only have to go a short distance and could well use alternate routes, use the express highway. The result was congestion, he said.

U.S. Ferry Cheaper In Long Run

Prince Rupert residents will find it cheaper to go to Seattle by Alaska State Ferries as foot passengers than they will be able to go by B.C. Ferry Authority and bus to Victoria or Vancouver.

This will be the keenest area of competition between the new Alaskan direct service to Puget Sound and the Queen of Prince Rupert when she resumes service — provided B.C. does not raise last year's prices.

CAR TRAFFIC

If B.C. Ferry Authority does boost its Kelsey Bay-Prince Rupert fares when the run resumes March 28, then Alaska State Ferries may even prove formidable competition for car traffic between B.C. points.

This became clear today in a comparison of 1967 fare structures for the Queen of Prince Rupert with those announced by Alaska State Ferries for its new southern service which begins operating this month.

B.C. Ferry Authority manager Monty Aldous was not available for comment this morning and it could not be determined if B.C. will boost its fares.

But here's how the two fare structures would compare if B.C. maintains its prices:

Alaska State Ferries will charge $36.50 for one-way passage from either Ketchikan or Prince Rupert to Seattle and will require purchase of a berth ranging from $6.50 to $18.50.

Queen of Prince Rupert fare, including express bus, is $41.50 per passenger between Prince Rupert and either Victoria or Vancouver.

Addition of the cheapest berth brings this to $47 compared with the $43 it would cost on an Alaska State ferry for a journey at least 80 miles longer or even 200 miles longer if the passenger goes as far as Ketchikan at the same price.

Documents Passed?

TOKYO (Reuters) — Former Japanese foreign ministry official Shingo Yamamoto, 37, was indicated here Friday on a charge of passing secret documents to a North Korean agent.

IT'S SIMPLICITY ITSELF as the washing machine says. You simply mark an X against the candidates you want elected. But nobody was doing it when this picture was taken at Goodwill Enterprises on Bay Street this morning. And the trend wasn't changing at press time. Goodwill, one of the five polling places in the city, was attracting fewer voters than the others. Stan Webb, Sharon Loughlean, Stan Birch and Margaret Wootten, like their counterparts throughout Greater Victoria, can only wait to see what comes out in the wash later tonight. (Bill Halket Photo)

BIG ONE-DAY BLOODBATH

Cong Mauled In Delta Clash

Mekong Reds Trapped

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese soldiers fighting in the heat and mud of the Mekong Delta badly mauled a Viet Cong force of about 1,500 men and won the greatest one-day battle of the delta war, military headquarters said today.

The battle against three Viet Cong battalions began Friday morning and cost the Viet Cong 365 dead before the day was out.

During the night, the Viet Cong slipped from the battlefield in small units but after sunrise today returned to fight pursuing South Vietnamese rangers.

No casualty figures were available on today's fighting.

Initial battle reports said 60 government soldiers were killed and 102 wounded Friday before the Viet Cong were encircled by armored columns and pinned down after being flushed from the sanctuary of the U-Minh forest 100 miles south of Saigon.

TEEN-AGE CASUALTIES

South Vietnamese headquarters reported that many of the Viet Cong bodies found on the battlefield appeared to be those of 13- to 15-year-old boys.

In today's fresh fighting, about six miles from the narrow canal which was the centre of Friday's battle, the Viet Cong were reported holding prepared bunkers hidden beneath banana trees. These were being pounded by bombs and rockets from American and South Vietnamese jets.

The delta fighting climaxed a week of major battle across the country, almost all initiated by southern allied troops in which more than 1,000 Communists have been reported killed since Monday.

STEADY, UNSPECTACULAR

Average Vote Seen for City

Voting was steady but not spectacular throughout the Greater Victoria area today.

Only in Sidney where the voters are selecting a new mayor was there any great stimulus on a mild but wet morning. Indications are that the Saanich Peninsula Community will poll a record vote.

In Esquimalt the vote to noon was heavy but official declined to forecast a heavier vote than in 1965, the year of the last reeveship battle.

Goodwill Enterprises polling place had recorded 86 votes, James Bay Elementary School 247, Sir James Douglas 544, and Oaklands School 342, for a total vote of 2,035.

Returning officer Morran Waller said there might be an urpswing in the late afternoonn but was forecasting only an average vote.

There are 20,638 eligible voters in Victoria. Last year with a three-way race for the mayoralty only 7,505 voted. In the last strictly aldermanic race only 4,861 exercised their franchise.

In Saanich, with 29,009 eligible voters, the morning vote was steady but normal.

OAK BAY BUSY

Oak Bay, with a record 54.17 record estalbished last year to shoot at, might be heading for a record. At noon 1,594 voters had cast ballots or 17.3 per cent of the 9,207 eligible.

North Saanich and Central Saanich reported only average voting and in Sooke where eight candidates are running for trustee jobs with School District 62 the voting was described as "very slow."

Both Saanich and Victoria are hoping to avoid the stigma of a new all-time low-vote record.

Victoria's lowest vote in recent years was set in August, 1965, during an aldermanic by-election when only 3,657 people cast votes, 13.76 per cent of the 20,245 eligible.

Saanich is hoping to pass its last year's dismal showing when only 18 per cent of its eligible voters went to the polls.

WIRE BRIEFS

Ford Men Out

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A wildcat strike by 300 Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. workers brought production to a halt today at the company's 146-acre car plant.

Bodies Weighted

DANIA, Fla. (AP) — The bodies of two young women, clad in black bathing suits and weighted down with cement blocks, were pulled from a drainage canal off the Atlantic early today, police said.

ARABS PLAN OUSTER OF ISRAEL FROM SINAI

CAIRO (AP) — Arab foreign ministers gathered today to start charting a common course on how to oust Israel from Sinai, the west bank of the Jordan River and the Syrian heights, all captured in the six-day June war.

In their three-day parley the ministers were to fix the date and agenda for the Arab summit conference later this month at Rabat, Morocco, and possibly start deciding how to deal with UN peacemaker Gunnar Jarring.

The Swedish diplomat leaves today from the United Nations to set up his headquarters on Cyprus, where he was expected to arrive Sunday. He has a mandate under a Security Council resolution to make the rounds of disputants in the June war in an effort to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict.

PICKETS UP AGAIN

No Break Seen In Press Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pickets maintained a tight ring around the Pacific Press building today in the second day of a strike against Vancouver's two daily newspapers.

The strike by the 670-member Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild prevented production of Friday's evening Sun and today's Morning Province.

Ed Benson, general manager of Pacific Press, said The Sun would attempt to publish at least a four-page paper today. However, it appeared unlikely the paper would come out.

No new talks or attempts at mediation were scheduled today.

Before noon striking employees of the two newspapers and Pacific Press began filing into the building to pick up pay envelopes for the week ending today—their last company pay until they go back to work. They stood in a light rain outside the main entrance, mingling with placard-carrying picketers, until admitted to the building in groups of five or six at a time.

The strike by the guild began at 8 a.m. Friday after more than six months of negotiations for a new contract reached an impasse.

Pacific Press Ltd. which prints The Sun and The Province, said Friday it plans to publish using supervisory personnel. But it was not known when publication would resume.

The Province attempted to put out an eight-page newspaper Friday night but was balked by printers, who said they considered the copy "hot" because it had been prepared by non-guild senior employees doing the work of men on strike.

The printers, who earlier had said they would respect guild picket lines, reported for work promptly for the evening and morning shifts. Picket lines

WATCHING the distribution of Canadian milk to hungry children of Asia is one of the greatest rewards for USC director, Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova.

CHILDREN OF ASIA FUND

Example of Caring, Sharing Restores Faith in Humanity

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Two grandparents in Victoria well understand the needs of children in Asia.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Jamieson, 146 Howe Street, have sent a moving letter to the Times expressing their belief in the work of the Unitarian Service Committee.

They write:

"It is the time of year when many organizations are appealing for help, most of them for worthy causes.

"Sometimes, in our selfishness, we are inclined to become impatient towards this multiplicity of appeals, and exclaim 'Oh, not another one.'

"However when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova (director of the USC) comes to town, and brings before us the heart-rending plight of millions of children in Asia, we become ashamed of our apparent indifference to the needs of others, and open our hearts and our purse strings.

"It is well that we Canadians—on the whole a self-satisfied, complacent people—are brought face to face with the sufferings of others.

"Perhaps, as Dr. Hitschmanova implied in a recent TV interview, our indifference stems from the fact that most of us have never experienced the hardships of extreme poverty, of lack of food and shelter. It is a poor excuse.

"When we consider how Dr. Hitschmanova has made the alleviation of suffering her career, working unselfishly to the limit of her strength, amid conditions of squalor which we can only imagine, our faith in humanity is restored and we heartily wish for more like her.

"Personally, although we are unable to participate in an active way, we sincerely hope that some of our grandchildren will be as concerned with the welfare of the needy ones as Dr. Hitschmanova and put that concern into action.

"A poet has said, 'Not what we give, but what we share, for the gift without the giver is bare.' Truly, this dedicated woman has shown us HOW to give. Thank you Dr. Hitschmanova."

The letter is signed "Grateful Grandparents."

Many Victorians appreciate the work done by the USC in Asia. They have already contributed their share.

But the Times Appeal is far from reaching last year's amount of over $13,000 in contributions.

We must try to surpass the highest objective ever reached—over $14,000 in the first year of the campaign in 1953.

We must not let Dr. Hitschmanova down.

Contributions may be taken to the main branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Yates and Douglas, the Times business office or mailed in care of the Victoria Daily Times.

SHADES OF DEMARA

Former Convict Poses as Doctor in Texas Town

GROVETON, Tex. (AP) — Residents of this town of 1,300 have learned that the only doctor it ever had was really no doctor at all.

He was a former Louisiana convict who had successfully posed as a psychiatrist at a Texas state hospital, and as a doctor here he had been granted a medical licence by the state of Texas.

District Attorney Harold Hollingsworth said the man is Freddie Brant who used the name of a Chattanooga, Tenn., physician—Reed L. Brown.

Hollingsworth said Brant had worked at one time as a laboratory technician for Brown. Brant was charged Friday with forgery and perjury in Kaufman County. Bond was set at $25,000, but Brant was unable to post it and remained in jail.

"Everybody in town practically worshipped him," said Mrs. William Bock, a licensed pharmacist, whose husband owns the only drug store in Groveton.

"I've filled prescriptions for a good many years and everything he prescribed seemed right to me," she said. "If there were ever any adverse reactions, I never knew about them."

BRANT
. . . tripped by druggist

P. M. Johnson, editor of the Groveton News, who said he was one of Brant's patients, added: "He sounded like he really knew what he was talking about."

"He knew about some medicines some of us had never even heard of," said a registered nurse at Trinity Memorial Hospital near Groveton.

Hollingsworth said Brant, described as in his early 30s, went to Groveton eight months ago after serving as a psychiatric intern at Terrell state hospital.

He said Brant, a native of Roseland, La., presented a licence of Dr. Brown as credentials when hired by the state hospital in 1964. He was there two years.

The charges, the district attorney said, resulted from the forging of Brown's name to commitment papers at the state hospital and with perjuring himself by swearing under oath on lunacy cases that he was a medical doctor.

The district attorney said Brant applied for a Texas medical licence under Brown's name and was automatically granted one on the basis of time he had practised at the Terrell hospital.

Brant's medical practice ended when a Louisiana pharmaceutical company, patronized by both the Texas Dr. Brown and the Tennessee Dr. Brown, became suspicious why the real physician wanted his newest shipment of drugs sent to the Groveton medical clinic.

Hollingsworth said Brant was paroled from a 12-year sentence in 1956 for bank robbery in Louisiana and earlier had escaped from prison in that state while serving time for armed robbery.

The Great Impostor

The case is reminiscent of Ferdinand Waldo Demara, generally known as The Great Impostor, who successfully posed as a ship's surgeon with the Royal Canadian Navy without any medical qualifications.

He also impersonated a prison warden, a learned zoologist, a church minister, a school teacher and a Trappist monk, and inspired a book entitled The Great Impostor.

This was the basis of a movie in which Tony Curtis played the title role and was seen performing a delicate operation while posing as a Canadian ship's surgeon.

Demara, now 45, has since operated a rahabilitation ranch for boys in the High Sierra, 17 miles south of Placerville, California.

Lynda Bird Weds Marine In Glittering Ceremony

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lynda Bird Johnson, dark-haired elder daughter of the president, was married today in the elegant white and gold East Room of the White House to Charles S. Robb, handsome young U.S marine captain she met a year ago.

President Johnson escorted Lynda to the specially-built altar before which, in a brief Episcopal (Anglican) ceremony, she became history's 14th White House bride.

Christmas greenery and hundreds of sparkling candles blended with mistletoe, white roses, orchids and gardenias in the great Halls, filled with 500 standing guests. The guests included top figures of government, relatives and many of the couple's young friends.

After the ceremony, the couple walked down the aisle as the 32-member marine band chamber orchestra played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, then went under the arch of swords held aloft by six of the groom's marine comrades.

A gay reception with champagne and dancing to Peter Duchin's orchestra and cutting of the six-foot white wedding cake with Robb's sword came next.

Six groomsmen in cutaways and seven bridesmaids in ruby red velvet gowns preceded Lynda and stood in a semi-circle around the altar.

Standing on the altar as matron of honor was Lynda's

Arthur Mayse

The election promises have all been made, and a few hours from now, by the democratic process of marking Xs with a blunt pencil on the end of a string, we will have saddled an assortment of men and women with the task of tending our regional affairs.

The winners, rather than the losers, have my sympathy. Whether veterans in office or rookies still unscarred, they have taken on a very tough job.

Wish them luck, because they are going to need it!

It may be that our local governments have faced a rougher task, but this I'm inclined to doubt. Certainly in the 16 years I've inhabited these parts, the challenge to make inadequate finances meet swarming needs has never been grimmer.

What we found when we came here, lured by the remembered loveliness of a unique peninsula, was a small city from which extended municipalities whose growth-rate was among the slowest in Canada. Areas now urban in character were still semi-rural, and the deep country was only a hop-skip distant.

That was Greater Victoria comparatively few years ago. Had anyone then predicted the influx of population which was to begin with the early 1950s and continue unabated, I very much doubt we'd have believed him.

Our hospitals are in trouble from which only a concentrated and costly effort can rescue them. The Times report on that subject Wednesday underlined their need for relief from drastic overcrowding.

Sewage disposal, a major headache for years now, is going to cost this area a minimum of $23.5 million, and approximately twice that sum if we refuse—as we should—to settle for a system by which sewage will be dumped into our surrounding waters.

Schools? We are taking children into our classrooms at the rate of 1,000 beginning students each September. One little school that began with about 90 kids in 1951 has spread in all directions to accommodate close to 300, and will need more rooms all too soon.

This is part of the load today's successful candidates inherit. I haven't a pig's idea how they're going to deal with it, and admire their courage in taking it on.

To the difficulties confronting them, you may add the neglect of a provincial government which seems determined that the municipalities shall struggle along with precious little help.

This isn't the way it should be; and certainly, in the matter of hospital aid, Mr. Bennett's government has been worse than laggard. We need, and should have, at least one more general hospital. As for when we'll get it, your guess is as good as mine.

What all this adds up to is a state of affairs which I confidently expect to grow worse before it begins to get better. As a voter, I don't envy those who must struggle toward solutions.

If you have ever observed through a council meeting, you will realize that even at the best of times, public office is no picnic. It's a grind, and I'm not sure that such rewards as go with election success compensate for the wear and tear.

I am not out to make heroes of those whom we taxpayers choose to represent us. Unless the world has turned upside down with a vengeance, their number will not be entirely free of chumps and do-nothings.

But they deserve a good-luck wish, before they go to the firing line.

Perhaps that will help compensate for numerous later occasions when we who elected them exercise another democratic right. They had better expect to be criticized freely and plentifully.

Mosaic On Verge Of Folding

About 7,500 copies of the four-page sheet were distributed free when the first edition was published Nov. 17. But a lack of advertisers put the paper about $135 in the hole from the outset.

NO ADVERTISERS

The next edition, scheduled to appear Jan. 12, will be printed but that may be the last because student staff has not been able to line up any new advertisers.

The 18-year-old arts student at the University of Victoria said canvassers "have been everywhere but most of the time we don't get past the secretary."

Grants from the B.C. Assembly of Students will support two editions but that could be the end.

The first edition, which includes stories by reporters from district high schools and dealt with a survey of student views on an English course, was well-received by students, said Mr. Van Veen.

GOOD STAFF

As for the next edition, "we have good staff and material, just no money."

Plans called for Mosaic to be published six times a year with stories of interest to high school students, their parents and the teaching staff.

Straight Talk Urged Over Hospital Crisis

100 STARS TO LIGHT SKY TO MARK CENTURY II START

A 100 star-shell firework will be set off New Year's Eve to mark the end of the Centennial Year and to mark the start of Century II.

B.C. Centennial committee chairman L. J. Wallace will light the firework and Coun. A. R. Mebs, chairman of the Victoria committee, will release 100 helium-filled balloons.

During the celebrations a time capsule carrying records and mementos of the two Centennial years will be implanted in the stonework at Confederation Court near the Legislative Buildings.

'Let's Have Facts' Says Board Official

By PETE LOUDON

A call for some straight talk from civic, medical and hospital officials to allay public concern over the current patient bed shortage was issued today by a member of the Regional Board.

"We are told we have a bed shortage crisis. But nothing immediate is being done in the way of temporary facilities, as far as I know," said Geoff Mitchell, Metchosin representative on the district super-council.

"This suggests the crisis may not really be a crisis," he said in an interview.

750 CASES

"We are told there are 750 urgent cases waiting hospital admission and 2,000 on the non-urgent waiting list.

"If urgent means urgent, is it good enough to tell the public to sit back and wait for a report of a survey of the situation which may appear in January?

"It is suggested it will take five years to build new hospitals. Can we wait that long? Isn't there something we can do now?"

He said words like urgent, crisis and emergency are often debased.

"An emergency isn't something you cure in five years."

On the other hand 750 urgent cases are an emergency, in his opinion. He thought hospital, medical and civic officials should assess the problem for the public.

"If it's an emergency, let's act like it is."

DOES IT QUALIFY?

Mr. Mitchell said the community has civil defence field hospitals ready for emergency. He asked whether the present situation qualifies.

Could, or should, hospital beds be put in sun rooms, should private rooms be made into doubles or small wards?

Has the hospital organization considered moving student nurses from residence into private quarters to permit these residences on hospital grounds to be converted as auxiliary treatment areas?

If there is a staff shortage, should nurses who have left the profession be called back to service and ward aides recruited from the community?

CHANGE SCHEDULE

He wondered whether operating room schedules couldn't be extended over weekends and evenings.

"It may be that these things are not necessary and that the public has been misled. This should be made clear."

Mr. Mitchell said it is "small comfort" to people waiting for treatment to be told to wait until the survey is reported to learn the answers.

He noted that a city physician stated this week that four persons on the "urgent list" died while waiting admission.

No one else in the medical-hospital fraternity has since commented on this and the public is entitled to know whether such a situation is liable to be repeated, he said.

The phrase "No comment—wait for the survey report" is inadequate and unfair under the circumstances, Mr. Mitchell stated.

WITHHELD COMMENT

(Until recently Victoria Medical Society provided weekly reports on the bed shortage to local newspapers. But last week a VMS official withheld any comment on the bed situation because of a possible controversy.

(Dr. C. H. Hemming, chairman of the Victoria and District Hospitals' Advisory Council also urged patience until the completion of the current hospital survey being undertaken for municipal and provincial governments by the Toronto firm of Agnew-Peckham.)

Ask The Times

Q. How does one get music or lyrics considered for publication? J. C.

A. By submitting them to a music publisher. The reference department of the Victoria Public Library has a directory of American publishers and lists of Canadian publishers can be found in the city directories, also in the library.

Q. Are Red Chinese troops fighting with the Viet Cong in Vietnam? A. S.

A. There have been no reports that Red China has sent troops to Vietnam.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

WHEN YOU'RE SIX you can smile even with a sore throat and confined to bed. You can accept poverty because you don't know riches. If you don't have toys you cut up newspapers. Patsy also needs extensive dental care and warm clothing. Welfare pays for her doctor and her medicine and someone will bring a Christmas basket. But after Christmas what? In a fatherless family of nine occasional charity doesn't guarantee a secure, hopeful future.

Our Dynamic Welfare System: A Lesson in Living Death

By PETE LOUDON

Premier Bennett should take an afternoon off and visit my new friends in Victoria West.

It certainly isn't doing much for 46-year-old Margaret, a widow, and her eight children, Sandra 19, Jack 15, Donald 13, Cindy 10, Richard 7, Patsy 6, Valerie 3, and Tina Marie 2.

The way our dynamic welfare system works, they are living on $32 per person, per month—if you can call that living.

Of course, if Margaret was to desert them, or if Margaret was to die—an idea she tries not to consider—the welfare system would spend a great deal more to help the family.

$32 Each

Right now they get $250 from welfare and $40 in family allowances from Ottawa. Divide $290 by nine—$32 each. Yet if the kids were in foster homes there would be $50 a month for those aged under six, $60 for those six to 12, $70 for those 12 to 14, and $75 for those 14 to 21.

No one could take in kids for less and give them the essentials. But their mother is expected to.

She could throw up her hands and say, "I can't look after them. Take them." But welfare authorities won't do that while there's any hope she can struggle along.

She couldn't do that anyway. She loves them. So she pays the penalty for trying to keep the family as a unit.

I'll personally drive Mr. Bennett or the mayor or anyone else who doubts this story, to see Margaret and her eight children.

This is what they'll see:

The glass is gone from the latchless front door and replaced by a sheet of plywood. The door opens on a drab empty hall brightened only by the big eyes of children, some of them in bare feet on a cold carpetless floor.

The rooms opening off the sides of the hall are necessarily bedrooms, three boys share one, four girls another. Margaret will appear carrying Tina, wrapped in a blanket. Patsy spends her days in bed because of a throat infection. One of the beds has no mattress. None have quilts or bedspreads.

Jack, the 15-year-old, will perhaps be giving Patsy her medicine "like the doctor said." Jack has dropped out of school but he has no job.

No Smile

Sandra, who is 19, stays home and helps too. Girls who can't afford to dress as well as others their age and who are painfully aware of a need for a dentist's help, usually stay home. She's a pretty girl otherwise but there's no smile in her eyes.

One of the youngsters will be feeding green millwood to the crumbling brick fireplace in the living room. There's neither grate nor firescreen, but then the stuff burns like a wet mattress. It hardly heats the patternless linoleum.

Recently, when the wood ran out and the kitchen oil stove failed simultaneously, they fed some of the kitchen chairs into the fireplace to keep the little ones warm.

Margaret and her oldest keep the house as neat as they can. But the paint needs redoing so badly everything looks drab. The lights won't be on because the bill must be kept down. There's no TV, of course. But one of the boys built a radio out of parts of several others.

Window Broken

The big window in the kitchen is broken and covered with cardboard.

The bathroom needs plaster but radiant against the wall is the family's pride and joy—a sparkling new toilet. The old one misbehaved so Margaret, on her own, went out and bought a toilet and tank and she and Jack installed it.

But they didn't seal the outlet and flooded the bathroom. Trying to fix it they broke the bowl. They had to get another and a plumber and they're trying to pay off the $110 bill at $10 a month.

The premier would be glad to know they are a pay-as-you-go family, aside from the toilet payment. A social worker gives them regular vouchers for groceries, fuel, water and lights.

The voucher for this week's groceries totalled $34.11—for nine people, all according to regulations, recommendations and stipulations laid down by the provincial welfare department.

For clothes and almost everything else they depend on the $40 federal government family allowance cheque—and charity.

No one really expects the premier to visit Margaret and her kids. A boost in her welfare allowances is unlikely. After all they eat and sleep and her medical expenses are being paid and she just got a Merry Christmas $10 bonus from welfare authorities. Divide that by nine and see what it comes to.

But any reader who has spare linens, blankets, furniture, pots, food, clothing, can help her by donating them to St. Vincent De Paul Stores. Just say it's for Margaret.

Temporary

The St. Vincent's people will sort the donations and give her what she needs and some other family may benefit from duplicate gifts if the city is generous.

The thing to remember is that this is a temporary type of help to one family out of many in similar straits here and elsewhere in B.C.

The only way anyone can help Margaret and her family on a permanent basis — and others in the same boat—is by convincing the government that $30 per person is too little aid for a widow and eight children.

How do you go about that? You tell me.

FOUR PEDESTRIANS TREATED IN HOSPITAL

Rash of Injuries Ends Safety Week

Four pedestrians have been treated in hospital in the last 24 hours after being knocked down by cars on Victoria streets.

Three are still in hospital.

Mrs. Jessie Smith, 86, of 1515 Belcher, is in Royal Jubilee Hospital with undetermined injuries. She was hit at Oak Bay and Morrison at 9:30 a.m. today.

Police have not released the name of the driver involved.

William Webster, 19, of 1190 May St., is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with a broken knee and head injuries.

He was hit by a car at Cook and Oliphant at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Police say the car was driven by Geoffry Holyhead, 3401 Cook.

Nine-year-old Stewart Kirkley, 1408 Stadacona, was treated for leg injuries after he was hit as he crossed Begbie St. at 6:50 Friday night.

Police say he was struck by a car eastbound on Begbie driven by James Cowie, 1740 Garnet.

A fourth pedestrian, Margaret Pratt, 18, of Suite 7, 750 Pemberton, is in satisfactory condition in St. Joseph's Hospital with cuts and bruises.

Police report she was hit as she crossed Fort near Pemberton by a car driven west on Fort by Alfred Broome, 865 St. Patrick.

Four pedestrians have died on Victoria streets in the past two and one-half weeks, and harried city traffic police are continuing efforts to halt the carnage.

CHIEF ASSET of a firefighter is a good water supply and scout Trevor Dawson, 13, of 1615 Giadstone, finds this out the hard way at the navy's Colwood section, where he spent a day with firefighters. Standing by as he tried to open main valve is Petty Officer Alex Beaulieu. Trevor recently won second prize of $250 in an essay contest sponsored by the Canadian Association of Fire Chiefs.

TV THIS WEEK

By AL FORREST
Staff Writer

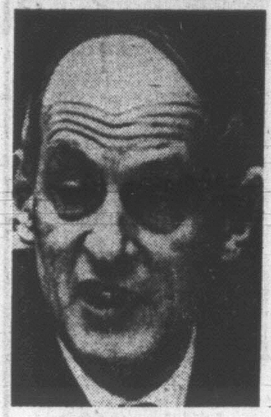
The personality of Rene Levesque continued to dominate television this week as the nation became more and more deeply embroiled in the Quebec problem.

Not that Rene is the official spokesman for anybody. He was all but turfed out of the Quebec Liberal party this fall and forced to sit as an independent member of the Quebec legislature.

He is simply a Quebec Power advocate but an eloquent one.

Commentators rushed to get his views on tape and cameras zoomed in to capture those deep brooding eyes that come to a twinkle when someone notes that his name rhymes with Quebec, or to record his expressive Gaullic shrug if a critic notes that Levesque also rhymes with pain-in-the-neck.

He's not just a colorful rebel. On the screen he projects an image of intensity, humility and sincerity that marks him off from other political radicals who are colorful but might have trouble selling used cars. Levesque could empty a lot in 24 hours.



LEVESQUE
. . . ze villain

What Rene is trying to do, unfortunately is sell Quebec a bill of goods.

He is trying to convince his compatriots that they can play Separation Poker and win.

It's a quaint game, and like all poker contests it is 99 per cent bluff.

Levesque prefers to call the game Labor Negotiation.

As he was explaining it to the nation this week, it goes like this:

At the next election a political group will be elected to power in Quebec—led by you-know-who—with a mandate to separate the province from Canada.

Strike notice will be served.

But, Levesque argues, Canada, particularly Ontario, cannot afford to lose markets in Montreal and access through the St. Lawrence seaway.

English Canada, therefore, will bow to all Quebec's demands in exchange for continued access to the French-Canadian market and to keep Canada united.

A strike, he says, won't be necessary. There will be no bankruptcy and disarray. Just gold everywhere.

Ah, but what if ze bluff fails, monsieur?

●

THAT HALF HOUR documentary on Chicago Black Hawk hockey star Bobby Hull started with a roar and ended with a whimper.

HULL
. . . all that glitters

Then we were told that the truth about the Golden Jet is that he wants out of hockey as quickly as he can so he can make a fortune as an estate farmer and as director of Bobby Hull enterprises.

For those of us who prefer to think of hockey heroes as milk-drinking church-going citizens who only yearn to set a good example for the kids, it came as a bit of a shock.

Some of us prefer to remember Bobby as the man who stood for one solid hour in Victoria's Memorial Arena this fall signing autographs when he could have been relaxing in the dressing room.

Any man who can score 54 goals in one season can't be all bad.

ORIGINAL CREATION in an unusual and imaginative form, is a balletic choral drama which will form part of the program, It's Christmas, being presented by Bebe Eversfield's School of Theatrical Arts at McPherson Playhouse next Friday and Saturday. Nicole has music by Chet Lambertson and a story by Mrs. Eversfield and Dr. Lambertson. In the title role of the blind holly seller is Theresa Gales (above) with Kaz Niesowocki in male lead.

'Funny Feeling Singing With Dead Father'

By VERNON SCOTT

Williams Sr., one of the country music's all-time greats, died when Hank Jr., was only four years old.

But due to electronic gimmickry, the original tape recordings of Hank Sr. have been lifted from the orchestral backgrounds and rerecorded with Hank Jr. singing harmony with a father he only barely recalls, and with new orchestration.

Titled "Hank Williams Jr. and Sr. in a Recording Miracle" and "Hank Williams Jr. and Sr. Again," the albums have found considerable success with the country music cult. So much so, in fact, a third album is being cut.

WRITTEN BY SR.

All the numbers on the three albums were written by Hank Sr.

It is significant that Hank Jr. gives himself first billing on the albums.

He is a cock-sure kid of 18 who is starring in his first movie, a Sam Katzman quickie, "A Time To Sing."

Williams Jr. sees nothing eerie in singing harmony with his late father.

"It's sort of a funny feeling," Jr. said. "But I'm glad to be able to do it. All my records are cut in Nashville. Wouldn't think of recording anywhere else. They got the best musicians there in the world for my kind of music."

Junior, tall, blond and broad shouldered, hopes to establish himself as firmly with folk and country fans as did his father.

"Once you become a country music star you're made for life," he said. "You can cut any kind of record and people will buy it. Singers like Hank Snow, Webb Pierce, Hank Thompson, Johnny Cash and Faron Young have been going strong for years. They make a fortune."

Tastes may change with popular music, according to junior, and modern, electrified groups come and go. But country music, which he describes as true folk music, will march into eternity.

This is Hank Jr.'s second trip to Hollywood. The first was to dub George Hamilton's singing voice in "Your Cheatin' Heart," the film biography of Hank Williams Sr. four years ago.

Hank is a song writer as well as a singer himself. Four of the numbers for his MGM movie were the result of his own tunesmithing.

Camelot, Yule Fare By Bastion

The gifted writers of My Fair Lady and Brigadoon, Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, wove music and lyrics around T. H. White's brilliant book about King Arthur — The Once and Future King, and created a magical musical — Camelot.

Camelot, which will be Bastion Theatre's Christmas production, opening Dec. 26 at McPherson Playhouse, is magical in more ways than one.

There is Merlyn the Magician, who lives backwards through time, the witch Morgan le Fey who is persuaded by her wicked nephew Mordred to cast a spell on Arthur, and the nymph Nimue, who is Merlyn's fate.

There is even a miracle, brought about by Lancelot's purity of heart.

LOST FAITH

And when Arthur, forced into battle, has lost faith in his ideal of the Knights of the Round Table, there is the young boy, Tom of Warwick, ready to carry on the legend when Arthur tells him — "Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot."

Recreating the dream-come-true English countryside where by royal decree the rain may never fall till after sundown, and summer lingers through September, are Anthony Jenkins as Arthur, Vanessa Ramsay Lax as Guenevere, and Bill Hosie as Lancelot.

And with them in this "happily-ever-aftering" haven are Stuart Kent as Merlyn, Hugh Henderson as Pellinore, complete with old English sheepdog Ramona L. Henderson as Pellinore's dog 'Horrid', Markyta Mares as Morgan le Fey, Glenn MacDonald as Mordred, Nancy Watt as Nimue.

OTHERS IN CAST

Camelot runs Dec. 26 through Jan. 6 at McPherson Playhouse with evening performances at 8:30, and three matinees at 2 p.m. Dec. 26, Dec. 30 and Jan. 6.

The box office opens Dec. 12.

Actress Signed

Musical Circus Again Selected

Due to the outstanding success last year of the circus theme adopted by Solarium Junior League for its annual show, it has been decided once again to produce a musical circus for 1968.

The new edition of Solarium Circus Capers is scheduled for late March at McPherson Playhouse. Directors will be Wally Fletcher, stage, and Gordon Dickie, music. Mrs. D. Adair is the convener.

The organizers plan to use the Solarium chorus and Hi-Steppers but they are looking for vocalists, jugglers, new variety and possibly live animal acts.

Anyone interested and able to present good acts such as the above should phone either 477-4308 or 383-9477 to arrange auditions.

FINAL ★ ★ ★ ★ BULLETINS

Howe Out of Bed Shortly

DETROIT (CP-AP)—Gordie Howe has passed a kidney stone, his doctors said today, and will be released from hospital shortly.

Yule Truce Debate Planned

SAIGON (Reuters)—South Vietnam next week will announce its proposal for a holiday truce in the war, Foreign Minister Tran Van Do said today. South Vietnam and the six other countries with troops here are discussing the truce, Do said in a radio interview.

Singer Feared Near Death

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI)—Doctors here reported that folk singer Jimmie Rodgers, 33, was near death this afternoon, one week after he was hit over the head in a street robbery.

Heart Rejection Detected

CAPE TOWN (CP)—Doctors today detected and countered the first faint signs of tissue rejection as Louis Washkansky completed his first week with his transplanted heart. (See story Page 40).

A spokesman at Groote Schuur Hospital said the signs of a slight rejection had been detected in detailed tests on Washkansky.

Average Vote Seen for City

Voting was steady but not spectacular throughout the Greater Victoria area today.

Only in Sidney where the voters are selecting a new mayor was there any great stimulus on a mild but wet morning. Indications are that the Saanich Peninsula Community will poll a record vote.

In Esquimalt the vote to noon was heavy but official declined to forecast a heavier vote than in 1965, the year of the last reeveship battle.

Goodwill Enterprises polling place had recorded 86 votes, James Bay Elementary School 247, Sir James Douglas 544, and Oaklands School 342, for a total vote of 2,035.

Returning officer Morran Waller said there might be an upswing in the late afternoon but was forecasting only an average vote.

There are 20,638 eligible voters in Victoria. Last year with a three-way race for the mayoralty only 7,505 voted. In the last strictly aldermanic race only 4,861 exercised their franchise.

In Saanich, with 29,009 eligible voters, the morning vote was steady but normal.

Oak Bay, with a record 54.17 record established last year to shoot at, might be heading for a record. At noon 1,594 voters had cast ballots or 17.3 per cent of the 9,207 eligible.

North Saanich and Central Saanich reported only average voting and in Sooke where eight candidates are running for trustee jobs with School District 62 the voting was described as "very slow."

Both Saanich and Victoria are hoping to avoid the stigma of a new all-time low-vote record.

Victoria's lowest vote in recent years was set in August, 1965, during an aldermanic by-election when only 3,657 people cast votes, 13.76 per cent of the 20,245 eligible.

PROBLEMS CREATED

TORONTO (CP) — The rapidly developing ability to transplant vital organs from one body to another is creating serious medical-legal problems, doctors here say.

An immediate question, they said, was created by the transplant of the heart of a young South African girl, dead of traffic injuries, into the body of Cape Town grocer Louis Washkansky. The question is, who is the actual survivor?

SUN FAILS TO PUBLISH

Printers Rule Copy 'Hot'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking editorial and office employees of Pacific Press Ltd. today halted production of the city's only daily newspapers for the second straight day.

The evening Sun, which did not publish Friday, attempted to bring out a four-page paper today but printers refused to handle copy prepared by senior editors.

The strike by the 670-member Vancouver-New Westminster newspaper guild began at 8 a.m. Friday after more than six months of negotiations for a new contract reached a final impasse.

Pacific Press, which prints the Sun and the Province, said Friday it plans to publish using supervisory personnel. But it was not known when publication would resume.

"Members of the International Typographical Union have never before refused to handle their material," the spokesman said.

NON-GUILD PEOPLE

The printers said the news material was "hot copy" because it was prepared by non-guild senior employees doing the work of men on strike.

Before noon striking employees of the two newspapers and Pacific Press began filing into the building to pick up pay envelopes for the week ending today—their last company pay until they go back to work. They stood in a light rain outside the main entrance, mingling with placard-carrying picketers, until admitted to the building in groups of five or six at a time.

Meanwhile, some 200 members of the Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America at a meeting today pledged "all-out support" for the striking Guild members.

Reds Trapped In Mekong Area

SAIGON (AP)—South Vietnamese soldiers fighting in the heat and mud of the Mekong Delta badly mauled a Viet Cong force of about 1,500 men and won the greatest one-day battle of the delta war, military headquarters said today.

The battle against three Viet Cong battalions began Friday morning and cost the Viet Cong 365 dead before the day was out.

During the night, the Viet Cong slipped from the battlefield in small units but after sunrise today returned to fight pursuing South Vietnamese rangers.

No casualty figures were available on today's fighting.

Initial battle reports said 60 government soldiers were killed and 102 wounded Friday before the Viet Cong were encircled by armored columns and pinned down after being flushed from the sanctuary of the U-Minh forest 100 miles south of Saigon.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported that many of the Viet Cong bodies found on the battlefield appeared to be those of 13- to 15-year-old boys.

In today's fresh fighting, about six miles from the narrow canal which was the centre of Friday's battle, the Viet Cong were reported holding prepared bunkers hidden beneath banania trees. These were being pounded by bombs and rockets from American and South Vietnamese jets.

The delta fighting climaxed a week of major battle across the country, almost all initiated by southern allied troops in which more than 1,000 Communists have been reported killed since Monday.

The heavier ground operations in the South and the slackening air war in North Vietnam followed the seasonal pattern—the coming of monsoon rains to North Vietnam and the shift to dry weather in the South.

Coalition In Viet Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imposition of a coalition government in South Vietnam would conflict with the fundamental U.S. objective that the South Vietnamese people "determine their own future without external influence," the state department said Friday.

The statement was part of a summary of U.S. policy toward the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong. It was issued by the state department in the wake of speculation by Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey on the possibility of NLF representation in a future government for South Vietnam.

Humphrey said in a CBS radio interview Thursday that negotiations over ending the war may involve, at some future date, what he termed non-Communist elements of the NLF.

CHILDREN OF ASIA FUND

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Jamieson, 146 Howe Street, have sent a moving letter to the Times expressing their belief in the work of the Unitarian Service Committee.

They write:

"It is the time of year when many organizations are appealing for help, most of them for worthy causes.

"Sometimes, in our selfishness, we are inclined to become impatient towards this multiplicity of appeals, and exclaim 'Oh, not another one.'

"However when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova (director of the USC) comes to town, and brings before us the heart-rending plight of millions of children in Asia, we become ashamed of our apparent indifference to the needs of others, and open our hearts and our purse strings.

"It is well that we Canadians—on the whole a self-satisfied, complacent people—are brought face to face with the sufferings of others.

"Perhaps, as Dr. Hitschmanova implied in a recent TV interview, our indifference stems from the fact that most of us have never experienced the hardships of extreme poverty, of lack of food and shelter. It is a poor excuse.

"When we consider how Dr. Hitschmanova has made the alleviation of suffering her career, working unselfishly to the limit of her strength, amid conditions of squalor which we can only imagine, our faith in humanity is restored and we heartily wish for more like her.

"Personally, although we are unable to participate in an active way, we sincerely hope that some of our grandchildren will be as concerned with the welfare of the needy ones as Dr. Hitschmanova and put that concern into action.

"A poet has said, 'Not what we give, but what we share, for the gift without the giver is bare.' Truly, this dedicated woman has shown us HOW to give. Thank you Dr. Hitschmanova."

The letter is signed "Grateful Grandparents."

Many Victorians appreciate the work done by the USC in Asia. They have already contributed their share.

But the Times Appeal is far from reaching last year's amount of over $13,000 in contributions.

We must try to surpass the highest objective ever reached—over $14,000 in the first year of the campaign in 1953.

We must not let Dr. Hitschmanova down.

Contributions may be taken to the main branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Yates and Douglas, the Times business office or mailed in care of the Victoria Daily Times.

SHADES OF DEMARA

Former Convict Poses as Doctor in Texas Town

GROVETON, Tex. (AP) — Residents of this town of 1,300 have learned that the only doctor it ever had was really no doctor at all.

He was a former Louisiana convict who had successfully posed as a psychiatrist at a Texas state hospital, and as a doctor here he had been granted a medical licence by the state of Texas.

District Attorney Harold Hollingsworth said the man is Freddie Brant who used the name of a Chattanooga, Tenn., physician—Reed L. Brown.

Hollingsworth said Brant had worked at one time as a laboratory technician for Brown. Brant was charged Friday with forgery and perjury in Kaufman County. Bond was set at $25,000, but Brant was unable to post it and remained in jail.

"Everybody in town practically worshipped him," said Mrs. William Bock, a licensed pharmacist, whose husband owns the only drug store in Groveton.

"I've filled prescriptions for a good many years and everything he prescribed seemed right to me," she said. "If there were ever any adverse reactions, I never knew about them."

P. M. Johnson, editor of the Groveton News, who said he was one of Brant's patients, added: "He sounded like he really knew what he was talking about."

"He knew about some medicines some of us had never even heard of," said a registered nurse at Trinity Memorial Hospital near Groveton.

Hollingsworth said Brant, described as in his early 30s, went to Groveton eight months ago after serving as a psychiatric intern at Terrell state hospital.

He said Brant, a native of Roseland, La., presented a licence of Dr. Brown as credentials when hired by the state hospital in 1964. He was there two years.

The charges, the district attorney said, resulted from the forging of Brown's name to commitment papers at the state hospital and with perjuring himself by swearing under oath on lunacy cases that he was a medical doctor.

The district attorney said Brant applied for a Texas medical licence under Brown's name and was automatically granted one on the basis of time he had practised at the Terrell hospital.

Brant's medical practice ended when a Louisiana pharmaceutical company, patronized by both the Texas Dr. Brown and the Tennessee Dr. Brown, became suspicious why the real physician wanted his newest shipment of drugs sent to the Groveton medical clinic.

Hollingsworth said Brant was paroled from a 12-year sentence in 1956 for bank robbery in Louisiana and earlier had escaped from prison in that state while serving time for armed robbery.

The Great Impostor

The case is reminiscent of Ferdinand Waldo Demara, generally known as The Great Impostor, who successfully posed as a ship's surgeon with the Royal Canadian Navy without any medical qualifications.

He also impersonated a prison warden, a learned zoologist, a church minister, a school teacher and a Trappist monk, and inspired a book entitled The Great Impostor.

This was the basis of a movie in which Tony Curtis played the title role and was seen performing a delicate operation while posing as a Canadian ship's surgeon.

Demara, now 45, has since operated a rahabilitation ranch for boys in the High Sierra, 17 miles south of Placerville, California.

Lynda Bird Weds Marine In Glittering Ceremony

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lynda Bird Johnson, dark-haired elder daughter of the president, was married today in the elegant white and gold East Room of the White House to Charles S. Robb, handsome young U.S marine captain she met a year ago.

President Johnson escorted Lynda to the specially-built altar before which, in a brief Episcopal (Anglican) ceremony, she became history's 14th White House bride.

Christmas greenery and hundreds of sparkling candles blended with mistletoe, white roses, orchids and gardenias in the great halls, filled with 500 standing guests. The guests included top figures of government, relatives and many of the couple's young friends.

After the ceremony, the couple walked down the aisle as the 32-member marine band chamber orchestra played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, then went under the arch of swords held aloft by six of the groom's marine comrades.

A gay reception with champagne and dancing to Peter Duchin's orchestra and cutting of the six-foot white wedding cake with Robb's sword came next.

Lynda walked a 190-foot route down red-carpeted, marble and parquet floors on the arms of her father to the altar in the East room.

Six groomsmen in cutaways and seven bridesmaids in ruby red velvet gowns preceded Lynda and stood in a semi-circle around the altar.

Standing on the altar as matron of honor was Lynda's

It's a Fight for Survival

Last of A Series

By BRUCE YEMEN

Serious doubts are frequently raised about the quality of French being taught to English-speaking students in the B.C. high school system.

Besides the shortage of qualified teachers with adequate skills in the language, there is the matter of the kind of French being taught.

I. E. LeFrancois, a French-Canadian teacher at Coquitlam's Centennial High School, doesn't mince words about it.

"Some call it Parisian French," he says. "I call it Persian French."

Mr. LeFrancois says he tries to narrow the gap between the French he must teach and the French spoken in Canada by giving alternate words wherever possible—for instance, he will tell his students that "pomme de terre" is the official word for potato but he makes sure they learn that "patate" is used by French-Canadians.

•

He says he finds it curious that while Canadians lean toward American English instead of British, they insist on French being taught on some distant Paris model.

Ernest Lecours, MLA for Richmond, agrees with many who would like to see a more realistic conversational French taught here but makes this point:

"Let Quebec improve the quality of its French before it is exported across Canada."

Efforts to do just that and define "French-Canadian" have been progressing in Quebec.

John Porteous, Greater Victoria school board trustee, agrees that French has special status in B.C. schools because of its "French fact" in Canada but places heavy stress on its international value.

•

"This is the age of instant communication and quick travel," he says. "We should prepare our children for tomorrow when they will be able to mix freely with other cultures. French is a very important international language."

On that basis, the "Parisian" French being taught now makes some sense, but there's another justification for it—the demands of the universities.

"Students coming to us must know the basics of French," says Prof. Gerald Moreau, who teaches French at the University of Victoria. "They must be able to write good French sentences and be able to read the best French literature."

Thus the recent trend toward more conversational French teaching and less emphasis on grammar has its limits—unless French classes are split into students bound for university arts courses and those who simply take the language as an "enrichment."

ANIMATED CHAT in French with Greater Victoria School Board trustee John Porteous gives Quebec exchange teacher Marie-Rose Pellerin a rare chance to converse in French during her stay in Victoria. A teacher in Central Junior High School, she says she has appreciated the chance to improve her English but finds the lack of opportunity to use French quite a contrast with Montreal, her home.

Almost everyone agrees that beginning French in Grade 8, as in B.C. schools, is too late. Even if the emphasis at that point is on conversation, the sing-song repetitive drill that is necessary can bore the students almost as much as the grammar is apt to.

Marie-Rose Pellerin, exchange teacher from Quebec teaching French at Central Junior High School in Victoria, thinks the elements of French would be much better taught starting at Grade 5.

Ernest Lecours thinks Grade 3 would be the best time to begin it. John Porteous, who speaks French, says Grade 1 would be the ideal time to start French or any other language—the younger the child the more receptive he is to a second language.

•

In Coquitlam school district where about one-seventh of the population is French-Canadian, all elementary schools offer French beginning in Grade 5.

In Vancouver 11 elementary schools have experiments going in French from as early as Grade 3 in some cases up to Grade 7.

In Victoria, four schools—Macauley, Willows, Gordon Head and Uplands—are experimenting with some pre-Grade 8 French.

But as A. J. Longmore, assistant district superintendent for Victoria schools, pointed out, such experiments are limited and are possible only where qualified staff can be found. Victoria and B.C. generally are not exactly overflowing with qualified teachers of French.

One means of overcoming this shortage would be to increase teacher exchanges. Complaints that Quebec couldn't or wouldn't supply French teachers for exchanges have been heard from all Western provinces in the past.

•

Such exchanges now appear to be on the increase. Miss Pellerin, one of three exchange teachers here, feels that intensive summer training in an all-French environment could prepare English-speaking B.C. teachers to give adequate elementary grade instruction in French.

She agreed with most educators in saying it is unrealistic to expect the school system to produce graduates capable of speaking French without difficulty. There just isn't any opportunity to practise it outside of school, she said. Teaching at an earlier age wouldn't change that.

For that same reason—and because the French taught is not the spoken language of French-Canadians—instruction in French as an art is of little value to French-Canadians trying to preserve their language.

•

Like the B.C. French-Canadian Federation, Miss Pellerin believes only French as a language of instruction in all courses can achieve that aim.

Mr. Porteous feels that classes for French-Canadians in their own language would be out of place in Victoria—and unnecessary.

Teach French well enough and at an early enough age, he says, and it will be the "living language" that French-Canadians here want it to be.

French-Canadians don't agree, and even if they did they would argue with that approach because it would be years before the needed improvements could be made—if B.C. people would support the changes.

•

The immediate problem, they say, is not giving French to the English in a province where French is not a necessary tool—delighted though they are by improvements in "enrichment" French teaching.

The real problem, they say, and the one most easily solved, is helping the French-Canadians here preserve their language.

If only their own survival were at stake they wouldn't hold out much hope for success in their battle, because numerically they don't count for much in B.C.

But they understand clearly that they count for a lot in Canada. What is at stake is not so much their own survival, but Canada's.

And as Canadians who happen to speak French, they hope that Premier Bennett, who happens to speak English, will understand the importance of the issue.

BUT DOESN'T RECRUIT THEM—CAMPBELL

B.C. Allows 'Single' Adoptions

Single people who want to adopt a child will be considered in the same way married couples are, Welfare Minister Dan Campbell said Friday.

"We would want to satisfy oursleves that the single person, whoever he or she is, is capable of handling the child."

The minister doubted, however, that many single persons would be interested in adopting a child.

The department has approved five adoptions by single people in the past 10 years, said Donald Bingham, superintendent of the child welfare division.

Cases varied but would likely involve approving adoption of a relative by a single person in a position to do so or adoption of a child first placed in the home as a faster child, he added.

The thing to remember, he stressed, is that the department supports the principle of such adoptions.

It has not tried to recruit single persons for adoption though because "we don't think this is the most profitable recruiting area."

With the province's backlog of children awaiting adoption authorities might be forced to consider actively seeking single adoptive parents, he added.

National Talks Asked On Inflation Battle

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Stanfield said Friday the time is ripe for federal-provincial consultation on spending priorities and anti-inflation measures.

"I say this because the crunch is on this government; the financial crunch is on the provinces," the Conservative skipper said during the Commons budget debate.

Mr. Stanfield said he thought there was a chance now to establish effetive federal-provincial consultation aimed at "achieving an appropriate fiscal policy for the country as a whole."

The consultation had to be sincere—not the kind in which Finance Minister Sharp had urged provincial restraint while the federal government was inviting them "to embark on a substantial expansion in their expenditures."

This remark and others in the Stanfield speech apparently were aimed at the medical care insurance program due to come into operation next July 1.

SHARE MEDICARE

Under medical care, the federal government would contribute half the cost of provinial schemes that met certain standards.

Mr. Stanfield said that increasing deficits evidently are ahead for both Ottawa and the provinces.

"Considering our circumstances as they relate to existing programs, we cannot think of introducing any new programs," he added.

The budget debate resumes in the Commons Monday, with a vote scheduled on a Conservative non-confidence motion that describes new tax increases as inflationary and the result of government extravagance.

The motion has slim chance of passage, since the NDP already has indicated it won't support it.
